ANOTHER CRISIS DEVELOPS IN THE MEXICAN SITUATION

Situation Fraught With Perils for Mediation and With Possibilities that Might Precipitate Actual Warfare Between the United States and Mexico—Attempt to Blockade Tampico Will be Suppressed is Word.

Washington, June 7.—Another crisis in the Mexican difficulty faced the Washington government tonight, a situation fraught with perils for mediation and with possibilities that might precipitate actual warfare between the United States and Mexico.

General Huerta has brought about the new crisis by ordering his gunboats to blockade the port of Tampico and to seize a cargo of ammunition en route there for the Mexican Constitutionalists. The shipment is aboard the steamer Antilla from New York, flying the Cuban flag. Huerta has notified the powers of the intent to blockade the port and that he proposes to seize the cargo consigned to the belligerents against his sovereignty as contraband of war.

The purpose of the United States to suppress the attempt to blockade and prevent interference with the Antilla was indicated tonight when Secretary Daniels issued an official statement announcing that while no new orders had been given Rear Admiral Badger there had ben no change in the policy of the government in reference to its desire that the port of Tampico shall be open to all commerce. The statement follows:

Navy Department Statement.

"The Navy Department has issued no new orders to Admiral Badger since the Mexican gunboats were reported to be leaving Puerto Mexico. The department has at no time contemplated furnishing a convoy to the Antilla or any other ship nor have any orders to that effect been issued. No word whatever has been received as to whether or not the warships of other nations have ben notified of the blockade at Tampico or what their attitude would be toward such a blockade. There has been nochange in the policy of the government in reference to its desire that the port of Tampico shall be open to all commerce."

As to whether "all commerce" in this instance includes contraband of war, officials of the government will not discuss.

So far as known the only orders relating to Tampico that have been issued went to Admiral Badger on May 18 in a message informing that, while it was not believed the Huerta gunboats would return to Tampico, it was deemed advisable that the commanders of American naval vessels understood that the government desired that there be no interference with commerce at that port.

That the blockade decree will be carried out was verified today by Rear Admiral Badger in a report to the Navy Department from Vera Cruz announcing that the Mexican gunboats Zaragoza and Bravo, which left Puerto Mexico last night, had passed Vera Cruz and were steaming toward Tampico.

The American crusire Tacoma and gunboat Sacramento are following the Huerta ships. What the American warships will do when the commander of Huerta's ships attempts to seize the Antilla when she arrives at Tampico Wednesday, no official in Washington would say tonight.

Message from Badger.

The message from Admiral Badger received by the Navy Department today was:

"10 A. M. Sunday, June 7. Position of Mexican gunboats Bravo and Zaragoza at 9 A. M., latitude 19.43, longitude 96.3; headed for Tampico, making about nine knots. Should arrive off Panuco river about 5 A. M. tomorrow. Tacoma and Sacramento following in observation.

(Signed) "BADGER."

When this report reached Washington it immediately was communicated to President Wilson, Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Secretary of State Bryan.

Secretary Daniels hastened from church to his office, but denied himself to interviewers. Throughout the day and night he would make no statement. Neither would Secretary Bryan nor was there any official information obtainable from the White House.

The President conferred over the telephone with cabinet officials and also received messages from the American delegates to the Niagara Falls mediation conference. These were believed to have a bearing on the impending situation at Tampico.

Whether orders relating to the Tampico situation were sent during the day to Admiral Badger could not be learned. It was believed, however, that some orders were sent to him but so far as the publicly known position of this government is concerned, the United States rested on the order sent to Admiral Badger, May 18, informing him that the President of the United States wished Tampico to be kept open to commerce.

Tampico An Open Port.

That Tampico still was regarded by this government as open port was expressed yesterday by department officials but since receipt of information that Huerta's gunboats actually were en route to enforce a blockade there officials have been silent. It was pointed out, however, that in the order to Admiral Badger of May 18 there was no mention of contraband of war.

Three possibilities were discussed in official quarters tonight as likely to arise in view of the problem that General Huerta's decisive action has presented. Should the American government direct that the order to Admiral Badger be construed as to include delivery of contraband of war, Rear Admiral Mayo at Tampico would be compelled to open fire on Huerta's gunboats if necessary to prevent interference with the Antilla.

If this is considered an over act of war and a violation of the agreement to cease hostilities, it probably automatically would end the peace conference at Niagara Falls. In the opinion of many in close touch with the Washington administration this would mean the beginning of actual hostilities against Huerta and signal the advance of the American army from Vera Cruz toward Mexico City.

May Change Vessel's Course.

Another possibility, however, suggested in official quarters is that this government may bring influence to bear on the owners of the steamer Antilla to change her course and make no attempt to deliver her cargo at Tampico pending the outcome of mediation negotiations, and to induce General Carranza to participate in the peace conference.

Agents of General Carranza in Washington tonight said they had no official word relating to the proposed determination of Huerta to blockade Tampico nor any communication from Carranza. As to Carranza's expected answer to the proposal from the South American mediators, his advisers said it might not be forwarded before Tuesday inasmuch as Carranza did not leave Torreon for Saltillo until tonight. Should the Antilla change her course or return to an American port, danger of an immediate clash would be averted.

A third possibility discussed here is that Admiral Badger's ships would not interfere with General Huerta's purpose to blockade the port of Tampico against importation of ammunition, but that they would insist on keeping the port open to ordinary commerce. This might avert serious consequences.

Mediation Again Threatened.

Niagara Falls, May 7.—Tampico once more threatened the peace of the United States and Mexico. Fearful that events may transpire there—possibly within the next 48 hours—of a nature that would be certain to disrupt mediation negotiations, many principals in the conference are filled with aprehension.

The anxiety is provoked because of the situation in which the United States has been placed by General Huerta's determination to bottle up the port of Tampico in order to stop the landing of munitions of war for use of the Constitutionalists from the Cuban ship Antilla en route from New York.

The Washington government, it is understood feels it must prevent at all hazards the exercise of a blockade by a government that is not recoginzed as possessing the right to perform such an act under international law.

Should the Huerta gunboats Zaragoza and Bravo attempt to intercept and search vessels believed to have in their cargo arms and ammunition for the Constitutionalists, it is said here that American war vessels would interfere as for some time orders have been in the possession of Rear Admiral Badger to keep Tampico open to commerce.

The superiority of the American force would make a warning sufficient, it is believed, to prevent any act of aggression by the Mexican gunboats. The gravity of the situation is found in the danger that such an act by the United States might cause General Huerta to withdraw his delegates from the Niagara Falls conference.

Inquiry to Washington.

The situation arose as a result of a note of inquiry from General Huerta through his delegates here as to the attitude of the United States toward the port of Tampico. Justice Lamar and Frederick W. Lehmann, the American delegates, immediately referred the inquiry to Washington and the mediators were informed that the United States had taken the position that Tampico was open.

This attitude had been assumed after the Constitutionalists seized Tampico in order primarily to protect shipments of oil. It had been thought General Huerta's gunboats might interfere with oil shipments in a desire to keep Constitutionalists from obtaining revenues.

The American commissioners gave the mediators all the information they possessed and the three diplomats discussed it early today with the Mexican delegates. The envoys continued in consultation for sometime after the Mexican delegates had departed. All participants to the conference looked grave. One went so far as to say that "It looks black."

Cannot be Avoided.

Those in position to know say it is difficult to see how another rupture between the Huerta government and the United States can be avoided. If one occurs the opinion prevailing is that mediation proceedings cannot already have inormed the mediators they might have to withdraw from the proceedings should Huerta's efforts to maintain a blockade be thwarted by the American navy, this information had not been conveyed tonight to the American delegates. The Americans will confer with the mediators tomorrow when this point of view may be explained to them.

The Huerta delegates are said to have taken the stand that the United States now must remain neutral, as between the Federals and Constitutionalists. They say the American forces must not interfere with their efforts to stop the landing of arms for the Constitutionalists, and that to do so would put the United States in position of using it to advance the cause of Carranza.

New York, June 7.—The newest trans-Atlantic liner, the Cunarder Aquitania which recently arrived here on her maiden voyage from England, is counted the fastest of the new great sea giantesses. The Aquitania averaged over twenty-three knots for the first trip despite the fact that she slowed down while going through the iceberg belt. The ship is 901 feet long, being about fifty feet shorter than the new Vaterland of the Hamburg-American line, which recently made her maiden voyage. The Aquitania was docked in twenty minutes.

NEW ORLEANS FIGHTS FOR HER RACE TRACK

Bill Pending Before the Louisiana Legislature.

Ministers Preach Against Measure—Suffrae Association Lines up With Ministers and Will Fight the Bill.

New Orleans, June 7.—Final plans in the fight for and against passage og a bill pending in the legislature to submit to the voters of Orleans parish the question whether horse racing will be restored here, were made today. Several ministers brought the subject into their resmons and late the afternoon a mass meeing was held at which speakers would accurujPtoh Vthtlaas oanannaa told of the benefits they believed would accrue to the city if race track gambling was allowed.

Headed by a band and followed by many automobiles those who attended today's mass meeting paraded the strets early today.

The Reinhardt bil lwhich was favorably reported to the House is expected to come up tomorrow. It has been declared to put it on final passage Wednesday and in the two intervening days the fight is expected to be bitterly waged. A special train bearing what proponents of the bill say will be the largest delegation that ever went from New Orleans to Bton Rouge to work for a bill, will leave here tomorrow morning. The New Orleans ministerial association will meet tomorrow to take action against the bill and a meeting of the Era Club, an influential womens suffrage organization probably will have a season to plan for a final whirlwind campaign against the measure.

The Reinhardt bill provides that the voters of New Orleans be allowed to ballot on whether gambling shall be allowed under the Parl-Mutuel System with strict regulation of the sport.

VETERANS RALLY FOR BIG REUNION

Boys in Grey to Gather at Raleigh Tuesday.

TO UNVEIL MONUMENT

Thousands Will View Cermony Wednesday When Memorial to Southern Women Unveiled in Capitol Square at Raleigh.

Raleigh, N. C., June 7.—The reunion of the North Carolina division of Confederate Veterans with the unveiling of the monument to the North Carolina women of the Confederacy, the gift of the late Col. Ashley Horne of Clayton, will bring some 1,200 Confederate Veterans and many thousands of visitors to Raleigh this week. The reunion events will begin on Tuesday, June 8th at 2 o'clock with General Julian S. Carr, of Durham, commanding the North Carolina division in charge. There will be welcome exercises in the city auditorium on Tuesday afternoon June 9th responses to address to be made by prominent Veterans followed by the election of officers and transaction of business.

On Wednesday there will be a great basket picnic on capitol square.

The monument to the North Carolina woman of the Confederacy is now in position on the square, surrounding the capitol building and will be unveiled Wednesday afternoon June 10th. It is a $10,000 gift of the late Ashley Horne, of Clayton, a Confederate who served in the ranks, and who with nothing at the start, amassed a large fortune after the war. His death occurred last Fall, his gift was announced some months previously. Besides the inscription on one side of the pedestal of granite, there will be has reliefs on three sides, the figures in bronze, seven and a half feet in height, one representing the women of the South, bidding the soldiers good bye, on another the women welcoming them on their return, the main group being that of a woman narrating to her grand son, who has his father's sword, the story of the Confederacy.

The address will be by President D. H. Hill, of the Agricultural and Mechanical College, whose father, Col. D. H. Hill, commanded the first North Carolina regiment at Bethel. The monument will be presented by Hon. J. H. Long, of Roxboro, chairman of the Monument Commission will be unveiled by Ashley Horne, a grand son of the donor and will be received for the State by Governor Craig. A poem will be read by Henry Jerome Stockard. Later in the afternoon in the House of Representatives the portrait of Col. Horne, presened to the State by the Daughters of the Confederacy, will be unveiled by his grand daughter, Melba McCullers, the presentation being by Mrs. Marshall Williams, of Faison, president of the Daughters of Confederacy of the State and its reception by Governor Craig.

MERCHANTS OF STATE TO MEET IN DURHAM

Programme of Unusual Interest and Value Prepared.

Pioneer in Freight Rate Fight—Mr. Anderson Pace to be a Speaker—Winston-Salem to Attend in a Body—Some Features.

(Special Star Correspondence)

Charlotte, N. C., June 7.—A programme of unusual interest and value has been prepared by the North Carolina Merchants Association for its 12th annual convention, which meets in Durham, June 17th, and 18th.

No Association of merchants in the United States has been more productive in securing benefits for its membership than the North Carolina Association, and as a result the association has been making a steady and substantial growth.

The association has been wonderfully successful in securing legislation and since its inception has caused more business legislation to be enacted than was ever written before in this State.

It is generally recognized that this organization was the pioneer association in protesting against the freight rates imposed on this state and that it has never let up in its efforts to secure the necessary relief.

This year the programme will feature such things as pertain directly to mercantile affairs. Improved mercontile methods is a necessary study. New things and new methods are constantly arising and to this end the programme is directed.

One of the principal speakers is Mr. Anderson Pace, Industrial Commissioner of the Aassociation of Commerce of Chicago. Mr. Pace is one of the foremost mercantile experts in this country. He is a regular lecturer and a member of the faculty of several of the Western Universities. His address will be on "Modern Mercantile Efforts."

Another speaker who is well acquainted with the work to be done is Norman H. Johnson, Editor of the Merchants' Journal and Commerce.

The programme contains addresses by several prominent members and workers in the State Association. The main features cannot be shown on the programme by reason of the fact that they consist of an exchange of experiences and practices of the membership. These general discussions are of the utmost value and importance and will be greatly benefical to all in atendance. The convention is going to be the largest ever held. All the asociations have appointed their delegates.

The Winston-Salem Association has chartered special cars and will attend the convention in a body.

The officers extend special invitation to all merchants residing in the in the Convention.

The entertainment features are elaborate and altogether the interest taken in this convention gives assurance that it will be the best and most largely attended gathering of this successful organization.

SUFFRAGISTS HARANGUE BRITISH CONGREGATIONS

The Women Enter Catholic Churches in London, and Make Demonstration.

POLICE TAKE CHARGE

"God Save Emmeline Pankhurst" is Chanted.

Worship in Westminster Cathedral and Church of the Oratory Interrupted by Advocates of "Votes for Women."

London, June 7.—Suffragists for the first time today invaded Catholic churches and attempted to harangue congregations. Worship was disturbed in both Westminster Cathedral and the Church of The Oratory, Brompton.

Father Bernard Vaughan had just taken his place in the pulpit in Westminster Cathedral at the evening service when a woman rushed up the steps into another pulpit and waving her arms toward the altar shrieked: "In the presence of the blessed sacrament I protest against the forcible feeding of women!"

The congregation rose and murmurs of protest ran through the edifice. One woman tried to persuade the suffragist to descend from the pulpit, but she remained there waving her arms and yelling incoherently until forcibly pulled down the steps and turned over to the police. She declined to give her name.

A band of militants interrupted the midday mass in the Church of The Oratory by chanting: "God save Emmeline Pankhurst and all our noble prisoners; open the eyes of this church and of the priests to put an end to the torture; in the name of the blessed Joan of Arc, hear them in their hour of need." Great disorder ensued. A suffragist arose and started a prayer, but she scarcely had uttered a word when a woman worshiper clapped her hands over the mouth of the suffragist. The suffragists were forced by ushers and male parishioners to the doors and then into the street. Many of the congregation followed them to the sidewalk, where a well-dressed woman hit a militant in the face, which bled profusely. The crowd cheered. Two of the suffragists were arrested. They refused to give their names.

Growing Hostility.

The growing hostility of the public toward militant sffragists was shown by assaults today on several open air meetings. Speakers were mobbed, stands were torn down and the women were saved by the police from duckings or beatings. A crowd at Hampstead Heath knocked over the platform from which a party of militants were to speak and scattered the suffragists in all directions. They tried to drag two of the women to a pond for a ducking, but the police rescued them.

A similar scene occurred on Clapham Common. When a suffragist advocated the use of bombs the speaker and those on the stand with her were pelted with mud. The police helped the women to escape on a motor bus. A meeting in Hyde Park ended in like manner.

Sylvia Pankhurst at a meeting in the East End of London tonight declared that when she goes to see Premier Asquith next Wednesday she would ask for a deputation to accompany her, not only to plead with the premier but to threaten him.

A sensational incident of the day was the discovery of a young man who gave his name as Harry Pike, in Buckingham Palace, where the royal family spent Sunday. In the early hours of the morning Pike entered the palace as he explained afterward, to prove that entrance could be easily effected.

He scaled the wall and wandered through the corridors for some time. Once he was near the Queen's apartment. He finally was discovered, however, and overpowered in the servants' quarters. He will be arraigned tomorrow on a charge of having been found on enclosed premises for unlawful purposes. This is the only offense provable against him so far as the evidence shows.

There is nothing to show that Pike is connected with the suffragist movement. He gave his occupation as an engineer.

Notwithstanding the heavy guard of soldiers and police who are supposed to patrol the grounds closely, Pike scaled the palace wall, and climbed into a basement window.

The exploit of Pike caused great alarm and also brought forth a great deal of criticism of the system of guarding the palace.

NO REST IN SICHT FOR CONGRESSMEN

National Legislators Face the Week's Steady Grind.

FINISH TOLLS TODAY

Leaders in Senate Confident of Outcome of Repeal Vote—Anti-Trust Legislation Now Faces the Senate—May be Through Soon.

Washington, June 7.—Senate leaders expect to get through with the tolls exemption repeal bill tomorrow night, but the debate wearied members will have only a few days' breathing spell. Already the ways are prepared for anti-trust legislation and unless there is a change in plans the Senate will be at the steady grind of discussing the inter-State trade commission bill at the end of the week.

There is little doubt that the vote on the Tolls Exemption Repeal bill O'Gorman, who has led the fight against the measure, expects a vote, and there are only two set speeches to be deliverey before the action is demanded. Through the agreement between the forces of flat repeal and the coalition of Republicans and Democrats, who favor a qualifying amendment proposed by Senator Norris, there is every prospect that the vote will be expedited. It was said today that while an attempt undoubtedly will be made to pass a resolution submitting the dispute with Great Britain to arbitration that will wait until after the repeal bill is passed.

Appropriation Bills.

The House is through with anti-trust legislation and will be hard at work on the appropriation bills and general legislation for some time to come. The passage of the tolls repeal bill with a Senate amendment will revive the subject in the House, but it is not believed that there will be any great difficulty in getting that body to accept the bill as amended. If the House does fail to accept the amended bill, it must go to conference, but the President is almost certain to win his fight for repeal in the end.

Chairman Newlands, of the Inter-State Commerce Committee, which has had charge of anti-trust legislation, is prepared to make an attempt to have the trade commission bill made the unfinished business before the Senate after the tolls vote.

There may be some opposition to this plan from Senator who are anxious to press other legislation, but in teh present temper of the Senate, it seems probable that Mr. Newlands will receive sufficient backing to win.

Few Senator expect debate on the trade commission bill to end in less than two months. The bill itself might not take such a great length of time, but it is open to amendments of any sort, and there is little question that many will be offered. The bill does not go into the subjects of interlocking directorates and holding companies, or of railway capitalization, but amendments dealing with these questions can be proposed and must be voted upon. Under such conditions the question is squarely before the majority leaders of how much anti-trust legislation they want to pass at this time and unless they limit action to the trade commission bill, Congress seems likely to be in session for a long time to come. Though night sessions might help toward an early adjournment, many Senators strenuously object to working night and day during a sweltering Washington Summer, and at present the prospects or adjournment before the middle of August or even later, are not particularly bright.

Shadow on Hopes.

The fact that the Clayton anti-trust bill, one of the trio passed by the House and informally approved by the President, has been referred to the Senate Judiciary committee for consideration, has not added to the hope of an early get-away.

The Judiciary committee has not considered anti-trust questions in connection with new legislation, and it probably will take several weeks to go over the Clayton bill before it is willing to report to the Senate.

The House will be engaged this week with the $107,000,000 Sundry Civil Appropriation bill.

The bill virtually winds up the appropriation bills in the House, and it is being made the vehicle of a wide range of political speech-making.

Two measures are to be pressed as quickly as the appropriation bill is gotten out of the way. They are the Moon Postoffice bill, providing for railway mail pay readjustment and opening up the assistant postmasterships throughout the country to competitive examinations, and the general dam bill which is before the House for action on a moment's notice. The dam bill, drafted to regulate dams on navigable waterways, is a compromise reached between the inter-State commerce committee and the Secretary of War, and is intended to meet vexatious problems that have arisen in various States.

The impeachment charges against Federal Judge Emory F. Speer, of Macon, Ga., of the Southern District of Georgia, will be reported to the Houst probably within a fortnight or less.

The sub-committee has agreed upon recommendations, but will withhold them until the report is submitted to teh full judiciary committee on either Tuesday or Thursday of this week.

House Democrats will soon have a caucus to pass upon some committee servation and cotton futures regulation legislation, and other measures whose sponsors are pressing for action.

THEATRICAL

This afternoon at 1 o'clock the popular photoplay house inaugurates what promises to be one of the biggest weeks in its history, and that's saying a whole lot. By their new booking arrangement The Bijou is presenting to Wilmington the newest and best pictures released, their presentation in Wilmington being only a few days after they are turned out complete by the different large film manufacturers. Noticeable on this week's program are several releases of the past week—just a few days old.

For today and tonight, the headliner is a big two-reel Imp dramatic picture, "King the Detective in The Marine Mystery." This is a big number in which King Baggot, the popular screen actor, is seen to his best advantage in the leading role. He has scored another distinct success in this picture and it will apeal to all Bijou goers today as one of his best, of many big productions. Supporting him is a big line of stars, including Frank Smith, William Welsh, Howard Cramptob and Miss Coffin.

Following this is a big number in a mammoth American drama, "The Pursuer Pursued," in which Ed Coxen, another popular screen star is the leading man. It is a mammoth play, one that will take well with Bijou patrons today and tonight.

A mammoth Crystal comedy, "Snookum's Last Racket," will end the day's bill, and is one of the most laughable of the many big comedies by this company of screen stars. It contains some of the most ludicrously laughable and absurd situations ever pictured in a movie, and will be one of the real hits of the day.

The Mutual Girl will be on tomorrow, Lucile Love will be shown Wednesday and The Perils of Pauline will be scheduled on Thursday's bill.

Whose Ring Is This?

Saturday evening a small colored boy was offering plain, solid gold ring for sale at Burke's jewelry store and other places in the vicinity of Front and Dock street, the price asked and the value of the ring giving suspicion that the article was stolen. Mr. Burke, the jeweler, calling Officer C. G. Jones soon after the ring was offered for sale to him, and the ring is now in possession of Officer Jones, at the police station, in case the owner may desire to recover it.

"Mistah, Ah don't want no truck with them folkses."

"What's the matter with them?" someone inquired.

"Mistah," he said seriously, "Ah fighted one o' them folkses once. Ah hit that man foah times, just as hahd as Ah could."

"Then I suppose you went away?"

"No, sah," he replied, reflectively. 'Ah didn't go away. He sent me."

LOCAL DOTS.

—It's a little early for the native-grown product, but the first watermelons of the season were displayed in windows of downtown restaurants Saturday night, notably the Everglade on Princess street. A car of the melons were received during the week from some point in Florida or Georgia.

—Pilot Hansley, of the auto police patrol, was bemoaning the fact Saturday about midnight that the big, new White machine was going to the bad for lack of use, only two arrests having been made requiring the service of the patrol for something like four days. However, towards day Sunday the calls began to come in and before yesterday morning about half a dozen had been berthed for a look-in on the Recorder this morning.

Concerts at Greenfield.

Concerts each Sunday afternoon are the order now at Greenfield Park, the Hanover Concert Band, of this city, furnishing the music. Yesterday was an ideal day at the lake and a large crowd heard the music, and enjoyed the rowing and other pleasures that the popular recreation place has to offer.

MAJOR LEAGUE RACES GROW IN INTEREST

Grouping of Several Teams Creates Speculation.

Rapid Rise of Chicago Cubs the Real Feature of Past Week—Pittsburghers Winning Again and Climbing.

New York, June 7.—June frequently has been a crucial month in major league pennant races and June of 1914 promises to bear out the record of many past years. In both the National and American leagues the race is still an open one with three teams in each closely grouped. By the fourth of July, however, if tradition holds good, some one team in each organization likely will have sprinted out in front for a lead that will make it an odds-on favorite for the pennant.

Giants' Lead Small.

In the older league, the Giants hold first place but by no commanding margin. Returning East from a tour on which they won most of their games, they struck unexpectedly hard going in Philadelphia getting only an even break with the seventh place team and opened their home stay with a defeat by St. Louis.

The Pittsburghers broke their long losing streak Saturday and surprising as it may seem, the end of their extended series of defeats which reached a total of ten, found them by no means out of the running. Only a margin of a little more than three games separates them from the Giants.

Reds Press Closely.

The leaders still are closely pressed by the Reds whose fine showing has been one of the big features of the season todate. Cincinnati is behind by only a two-game margin.

Cubs' Phenomenal Spurt.

Aside from the doings of the leaders, the rapid rise of the Chicago Cubs was a feature. The Cubs led the league in run scoring, while their boxmen as a rule, held their opponents to low scores, the combination resulting in five victories in six games played. Brooklyn has braced appreciably and Philadelphia went on a batting rampage and broke even on the week. Boston is playing better ball and winning a game now and then.

American Race Close.

In the American League the race is close between Washington, Philadelphia and Detroit. The Tigers felt the loss of Cobb severely. But Cobb is back in the game now and with him in the line-up Jennings' men look like a different team. As things stood before today's games were played, Detroit was only one game behind the Athletics and two games back of the Washington leaders. Detroit is at home for a long stay while the Eastern rivals are on the road.

The St. Louis team with one of the best pitching staffs in either league is keeping continuously in the first division. The class the Browns have shown all season, leads to the belief that they are up out of the ruck to stay.

Red Sox Broke Even.

The Red Sox broke even on the week. The New Yorks have failed to hit, although their pitching strength and general defensive work are above par. The White Sox also continue weak with the stick. The Clevelands recently have made the poorest showing in hitting. In three games against Chicago and St. Louis they got the grand total of two hits.

The Federal Survey.

The pace-setting Baltimore team suffered reverses last week and the race in the Federal League lightened up. Brooklyn took three straight games from the league leaders.

Chicago continued its good gait, despite the illness of Manager Tinker, who was out of several games. Defeats of Indianapolis and Kansas City helped Chicago early in the week, but when Tinker started a new pitcher, Dan Sherman, in the final game at Kansas City, he lost the chance of taking the whole series, Stovall's winning through the recruit's wildness.

Nearly every day saw a change in the ranking of the clubs, for behind the two leading teams, Baltimore and Chicago, the contestants are closely bunched.

The record in the American and National leagues of games played won and lost, with runs, hits, errors and men left on bases, follows:

Gossip From Washington

SENATOR BORAH in an argument about trusts said at a banquet:

"These men protest too much. They protest eternally. They're like Mrs. Caudle.

"Mr. Caudle fell asleep one night in the midst of a curtain lecture. When he awoke the next morning there lay his wife, head on the pillow beside him, scolding away for dear life.

"Amid all that noise he looked confused for a moment. Then, with a yawn, he asked:

"'Say, my love, are you talking yet or again?'"

Senator Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota is fond of automobiling. Last summer he and his secretary, Mr. Farrar, took a tour through the northern part of their state. One day, when about thirty miles from a town, the car was stalled by getting all four of its wheels into a rut, thus leaving the body of the machine high and dry on the dirt in the center of the road. Mr. Farrar went to a house near, borrowed a pick and dug the car out.

SENATOR M'CUMBER.

When he took the pick back the farmer asked them to lunch. It consisted of bread, preserves and potatoes. Wishing to donate something for the family, who seemed to be very poor, McCumber took out the only dollar bill he had—the rest of his money being in twenty dollar notes—and gave it to a lad of five.

"No, sir," exclaimed the father; "we ain't going to 'low you to pay nothing for a bite to eat. But if you is anxious to help in the community you might contribute to the church we are building."

And, as there was nothing else to do, the senator had to part with a nice, crisp twenty.

When Carter Glass ran for the Virginia senate and was beaten by what is known as the "machine" in the state his boy was a college student of great achievement on the athletic field. One day the lad went to Baltimore to attend a track meet and came home with a medal.

When he entered the dining room in which his paternal ancestor sat discussing some old ham and waffles the boy threw his trophy on the table in front of his father, saying:

"Well, dad, you see there is some one in the family who can run if you can't!"

Glass has worn that medal on his watch chain ever since.

Senator Overman was just finishing his education while working for Governor Vance in the office. Governor Vance had been fostering ambitions for the United States senate and had just about come to the conclusion that they were not groundless. But Mr Merrimon of North Carolina loomed up as a candidate.

© by American Press Association.

SENATOR OVERMAN.

Vance was elected, but refused a seat through his alleged lack of qualifications. Meantime he was re elected governor and returned home to take up the reins of state again, while Merrimon was sent on to the senate.

In the meantime the present Senator Overman had been between two fires. He was devoted to Miss Merrimon, daughter of the newly elected senator and foe of his governor-employer, and the governor-employer began again his fight for the seat in the senate for the next term.

Young Mr. Overman then went to Mr. Vance and said: "Well, governor, I've about finished my education now. You've been very kind to me, sir, but you know I'm engaged to the daughter of your enemy in politics, the two houses are bitter against each other, and so I—well, since I'm going to be married I reckon, sir, I'll have to resign."

"Have you any money, Overman?"

"No, sir."

"Any other job?"

"No, sir."

"Well, son, I guess if Merrimon can stand you for a son-in-law I can stand you for a secretary."

Today's Short Story

Disillusioned

SO my burglar had come at last. I had watched and waited and had about given him up, but all things come to him who waits, and my burglar had finally put in an appearance. I sat up in bed to get a good look at him, and after one glance I felt sick at heart.

The burglar of my imagination had always looked the gentleman. This fellow was a low browed, common looking man, who hadn't been shaved or combed his hair for a week. He not only looked common, but he looked low minded and tricky. I was disappointed and disgusted and asked:

"Are you sure you are a real burglar?"

"What yer givin' me, ole man?" he exclaimed as he tapped me on the head with the muzzle of his pistol. "After I gits through with yer ye'll think I'm a burglar fast 'nuff. Git over again' the wall. Now, then, if yer move a finger I'll bore yer!"

From my trousers he took a roll of money amounting to $40, from my waistcoat a gold watch, from the breast pocket of my coat some papers of no value to him, and after a glance he returned them. On the dresser was my diamond scarfpin, and when he had placed that with the other plunder he said:

"Now, then, git outer bed."

"What for?"

"I'm goin' to tie yer fast while I ransack the crib. Where's the wife and children?"

"Out in the country."

"That's good. I'll hev the crib all to myself. Put on yer trousers. Now sit down."

He placed the chair against the radiator, and as I sat down he whipped a sheet off the bed, tore it in strips and tied me to both chair and radiator. He was nervous and alarmed all the time, but attempted to hide it by bluster.

I finally told him that he ought to be ashamed of such nerve and was rewarded by a cuff on the ear which kept my head ringing for five minutes.

When he had secured me to his satisfaction, he looked me over and said:

"I'm goin' down into the kitchen for sumthin' to eat, and if yer try any of yer tricks on me it'll be the wuss for yer!"

"It is no use to go down," I replied. "There has been nothing to eat in the house since the folks went away a week ago."

"Then I'll hev to go hungry. Let's see what's in this safe deposit."

He opened all the drawers in the dresser in rotation. There were a few old pieces of jewelry, half a dozen old coins and the baby's savings bank, containing 119 pennies. When he had stuffed his pockets with his plunder he left the bedroom and went down the hall, and I heard him in the guest's chamber and the servant's room. He was gone about ten minutes, and when he came back he was in a bad temper. As I wasn't stocked up for burglars, he found no other plunder.

"Look here, cully," he growled as he stood looking at me, "I haven't found no bank book yit."

I was about to answer him when I saw the form of a policeman in the door. He had seen lights flickering about and, finding the front door open, had entered the house and softly ascended the stairs. My burglar had his back to the door, and the officer caught on at once and stepped forward and gave him a blow with his club which knocked him down.

When the handcuffs had been slipped on his wrist I was untied, and the officer and I sat down to compare notes and wait for the fellow to regain consciousness. After a time my burglar opened his eyes and sat up and inquired:

"W-what's up?"

"Nothing, except you are booked for state prison," replied the officer.

That was all. The fellow was lifted to his feet and walked downstairs and escorted to the station. I hoped he might nerve up and become a hero as he faced the judge and jury, but, alas, he pleaded guilty and shed tears when sentenced. Altogether he was a sad disappointment.

A DAILY THOUGHT.

SUNDAY.

Bear your troubles manfully. Every one endured bravely strengthens your character; every one shirked weakens it.

MONDAY.

"To make the wheels of the day's work run smoothly," says the philosopher, "there's nothing like a little oil." Harsh, peremptory commands only exact grudging service. Courtesy and consideration inspire spontaneous and conscientious work in return.

TUESDAY.

"Don't talk to me about company manners. Everyday manners ought to be so good that you couldn't make them any better if a king came to tea!"

WEDNESDAY.

Don't be discouraged if your work is small and insignificant. The thing is to do it well, whatever it is. The man who builds a lighthouse performs a great work, but it would be all for naught if the men who just keep the light burning, night by night, did not do their little part.

THURSDAY.

When you are in a tight place it is no use saying, "Oh, what a lot I have to bear!" The only thing to say is, "What's the next thing to do?" and do it.

FRIDAY.

Life is not so short but there is always time for courtesy.

SATURDAY.

When you feel badly used because you have to do many things for yourself remember that it is exceedingly good for you. It would be very jolly to have people around to do everything for you, but in time you would become a mental and moral mollusk.

Here's a Dining Room That Any Housewife Would Like to Have

CONVENIENT DINING ROOM.

THE dining room pictured here is furnished on unusually attractive lines. It is so simple and convenient that the practical housewife can appreciate it. At one end of the room there are wide doors fitted with tinted glass. The built-in cabinets along the wall are immensely convenient. Most dining rooms are from the housekeeper's standpoint woefully deficient in these conveniences. The furniture with its straight lines suggests the mission, but differs from it in essential points. The comfort and attractiveness of the chairs is insured by the use of neat cane seats and backs.

BRAZILIAN METHOD OF MAKING COFFEE.

A woman who has traveled extensively in Brazil brought home this recipe for making coffee: The coffee is ground the night before it is to be served for breakfast and put to soak in a covered earthen bowl. A large tablespoonful is measured for each cupful, and one for the pot. An exact cupful of water is measured for each person and is poured over the coffee.

The next morning the coffee is poured into the pot and placed over the gas jet. Only sufficient gas to keep the flame burning is turned on. The coffee is then allowed to come to a boil, but not to boil. It takes from twenty to thirty minutes for the boiling point to be reached, which is determined by the pressure of the gas. As soon as it has reached the boiling point the cook must stir it thoroughly and pour in a little cold water to settle it.

Just try this method of making coffee. It is more economical, as you do not need to measure such large spoonfuls, and there is less caffeine in it. It will require a half pound, or in some instances a whole pound, more coffee each month if purchased already ground, as ground coffee loses in strength.

There is one thing which must never be tried or the coffee will taste of metal and have a very unpleasant flavor, and that is soaking the coffee in the coffee pot overnight. The acid in the coffee acts on the metal pot, which can be tested by dropping some coffee on a steel knife, a dark stain being significant that chemical action has taken place.

A pinch of salt adds much to the flavor of coffee. The coffee pot should, of course, be aired, and it is a good plan to leave a little water, in which some soda has been dissolved, stand in the coffee pot to neutralize the effect of the acid in the coffee. A strong soda solution should be boiled in the pot once a week. Coffee without sugar is more easily digested, and less harmful than coffee with either cream or sugar.

Finding the Lost Needle.

When you drop a pin or needle on the floor you needn't break your back and spoil your clothes in your efforts to find it again. Keep a small magnet, with a string tied to it, in your sewing drawer and move it up and down and round about the place where the needle dropped. If there are children about they will love to hunt for you, and there are about a dozen chances to one that the strayed needle will be found in next to no time.

Don't Use a Stick!

Most people use an ordinary stick when carpets and rugs have to be beaten at spring cleaning time. But a proper carpet beater is far more effective and not so likely to injure the carpet. The really correct method is to beat well on the wrong side, then brush on the right.

Smart Sayings of Witty Folks

Hubby's the Goat.

Mrs. Exe—I wonder what present my husband will bring me tonight.

Mrs. Wye—What makes you expect one? Is it your birthday?

Mrs. Exe—N-no; we quarreled this morning.

Whaddy Ya Mean?

"I see where Gertie Bearskin, the dancer, was prohibited from completing her performance," remarked the old fogy as he looked up from his newspaper.

"Aw, she's always getting off something," commented the grouch.

Consequences.

"The two air men had a dispute about the steering and flew into an airhole."

"What happened then?"

"They flew into a passion."

"Then what?"

"Naturally they had a falling out."

Always "Cute."

Called to the bedside of a fond mother's baby boy, the doctor diagnosed the ailment as acute rheumatism. The mother responded quickly:

"Acute rheumatism! I might have known it. Everything he does or says is just as cute."

Not Monodynamic.

Mr. N. R. Jettick—Why in the world don't you go to work, Nicodemus; do you want to loaf all the time?

Nicodemus Eezy—No, sah; don' wanter loaf all de time; wanter sleep some.

FASHION FRILLS.

Artificial silks are much in evidence.

Beige is a favored color.

Piping is seen on all fashionable garments.

Yellow and blue is a leading combination.

Black puffings and raised, draped skirts have brought the pretty petticoat again into favor.

Pockets are set on coats at all sorts of angles.

Hats are worn at a sharper angle than ever.

An Old Favorite

Drop, Slow Tears

Drop, drop, slow tears,
And bathe those beauteous feet
Which brought from heaven
The news and Prince of Peace.
Cease not, wet eyes,
His mercies to entreat.
To cry for vengeance
Sin doth never cease.
In your deep floods
Drown all my faults and fears,
Nor let his eye
See sin but through my tears.

—Phineas Fletcher.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER

"When They See Only by Night."

Old Mr. Owl (in the tree)—Don't let me see you making love to my daughter, young man!

Young Mr. Owl—I guess he won't!

Riddles.

Why is a miser's charity never to be interfered with? Because what he gives is nothing to anybody.

To what age do most girls wish to attain? Marri-age.

Why are country girls' cheeks like a good cotton dress? Because they are warranted to wash and keep their color.

What crosses the water without making a shadow? A sound.

Trying to Whistle.

Joey puckered his little mouth to whistle,
His mouth so sweet and rosy and small,
But a smile crept out from a sunny dimple,
Straightened the pucker and spoiled it all.

Boy Superstitions.

It is bad luck to kill a frog. Such an act affects the milk of the cow supplying the family of the youngster killing the frog and thus serves to convict the culprit at the dinner table.

If one has a tooth pulled and will refrain from putting one's tongue in the cavernous vacancy, a new tooth, fully crowned in resplendent gold, will grow there.

Druid.

The word druid is said to be derived from the Celtic word dru, which means oak. This tree was especially sacred among the Druids, who frequently performed their religious rites in open spaces amid great oak groves.

PARASOL HINTS.

A very effective white linen parasol might be embroidered in groups of daisies. These might match in color some of the pretty cotton voiles that are in demand for blouses and that will be among the most popular dresses of the summer.

Some of the new designs for embroidering sunshades are on the lines known as futurist or cubist. They resemble splashes of vivid colors in squares and cubes intermixed with a bold note of black now and again. On white linen these designs are extraordinarily effective and make a gay note of color.

Black linen parasols are also embroidered in these designs. A gown of white linen, worn with a belt of black linen embroidered in these futurist designs, would be effective. The parasol should be embroidered in the same splashes of color and black suede shoes worn with white stockings.

Treatment For Burns.

For slight burns put the part instantly in cold water or cover it with moistened baking powder and then with a wet cloth. When the skin is destroyed the point to be attained is to exclude the air. Do this by covering the burn with sweet oil, vaseline, linseed oil, carron oil, lard or with flour spread thickly on a linen cloth or on cotton batting.

Loose Knife Handles.

Knife handles that have become loose can be refastened to the blades. Make a mixture of equal parts of quicklime and powdered resin, half fill the hole in the handle, make the part which goes into the handle hot and insert it firmly in the hole. Let it remain without moving until quite cold, when it will be perfectly firm again.

DANCE SHOES.

The Cothurn Is the Favored Footwear For the Tango.

The smart cothurn is the shoe for the tango, if one may judge by its popularity with dancers. The shoe is dainty and attractive, giving a glimpse of pretty hosiery while affording more support for the ankle than does the ordinary dancing slipper.

SMART COTHURNS.

'TIS THE FASHION!

White crystal beads and jet beads are much used together.

Colors in silk petticoats are either very vivid or very delicate.

Some new hats have their crowns altogether of tulle.

Albatross wrappers have trimmings of black and white stripes.

An immense tulle scarf to match the dress is pretty for evening.

Accordion plaited negligees are among the most satisfactory of any.

There is a closely knitted silk sweater which fits the body snugly and is comfortable under the coat when walking.

DAINTY NEW GLOVES.

Long silk gloves, embroidered from the wrist to the upper end of the same, are shown in tones that will match frocks and suits of the new colors.

Elaborate designs in white are used on the black gloves and white ones are stitched and embroidered in black.

Silk gloves with the wrists and arms finely tucked and stitched in a contrasting color are pretty and novel.

Black inserts in white gloves have the effect of bracelets, while the white tulle in the black glove gives a glimpse of the bare arm.

Glittering rhinestones are sewed to black gloves in some simple design across the wrist or slightly above.

DOTTED MUSLIN.

Many Attractive Articles May Be Fashioned With Stenciled Designs.

Dotted muslin makes a convenient material on which to stencil and is something new along this line. The dots take the color evenly and so do not present any difficulty.

A set of furniture scarfs stenciled in a rose pattern is particularly dainty and appropriate for a girl's room.

Firmness can be imparted by lining the scarfs with some color, a deep pink or green—in fact, any color which will look well with the stenciling. The lining should be basted on perfectly smooth underneath the stenciled goods and then the top and lining scalloped or hemmed together.

A pincushion and all sorts of dainty bags and cases could be made to match this set.

A dressing jacket and boudoir cap made of the dotted material stenciled in colors would be very attractive in-

NEWSPAPERS IN THE SCHOOL.

(By Daniel Webster.)

Small is the sum that is required to patronize a newspaper and amply rewarded is its patron, I care not how humble and unpretending the gazette he takes. It is next to impossible to fill a sheet without putting something into it worth the subscription price. Every parent whose son is away from home at school should suply him with a newspaper. I remember what marked difference there was between those of my schoolmates who had and who had not access to newspapers. Other things being equal the first were always superior to the last in debate, in composition and general intelligence.

A boy's idea of a political party is that it is a bunch of politicians who hold a State convention and decide on what they hope the people will like.

A novelist says "he threw himself at her feet." She probably drew them back to keep him from seing that her feet were not mates.

A society editor advises: "Take $1,000 and go to the seashore, which is the best health and pleasure resort of all." From whom shall we take the thousand?

"You can't fool all the people all the time," but you can fool enough of them to start a new party so you can drag it around with you and use it to your own advantage.

The Rocky Mountain region is said by geologists to contain the largest known phosphate bearing field in the world. It is at least 420 miles long by 220 miles wide, and lies in the States of Wyoming, Utah, Montana and Idaho.

A lanky Colorado man declared in a crowd that he had lost 200 pounds of flesh in less than one day. Hastening to call him a liar, the whole party apologized after he explained that his wife had fallen over a precipice and was killed a few days before.

One reason the people do not get what they want from the political parties is that the people do not seem to know exactly what they want. The politicians know that, hence they do about the same old way and trust to luck.

A Kentucky turkey and a big blacksnake had a fight but the turkey got the best of it and killed the snake. It was ascertained that the snake had swallowed a door knob, but in that instance the reptile's concealed weapon was where it could not be used on the turkey.

NOVEL CITY BEAUTIFICATION.

The city beautiful idea is growing, although it prevails and dissipates periodically in some of our Southern cities. Nevertheless, it generally has resulted in a remarkable improvement in the physical aspect of our cities, although there could be a decided improvement by floral beautification work.

The Christian Herald recently contained an interesting and entertaining article concerning a novel plan that has been successfully carried out in Minneapolis. That Western city has undergone such a wonderful change that it now enjoys the enviable name of the "City of Flowers and Hanging Gardens." It was planned in Minneapolis to induce business houses and dwellers along the business thoroughfares to beautify each street by the use of window boxes and hanging gardens. The plan was adopted, and the streets present the unique appearance of being the center of a floral festival.

Each season the business houses are canvassed and they renew their agreement to keep up their window boxes and hanging gardens, so that the custom has become so universally popular that green plants and blooming specimens exist in great profusion, clear to the tops of the buildings and along every portion of the streets. Wherever a box can be swung there is shrubbery and flowers, and many of the displays are original and unique, inspiring others to follow suit.

Last year more than 15,000 feet of such window decorations were maintained in the business thoroughfares of the city, even in the wholesale section as well as in the retail quarter. Private subscriptions are raised to install hanging gardens and they are installed and carefully watered and looked after by committees of an association which has the whole system in hand. As fast as plants die, they are replaced, and if the plants are diseased they are immediately doctored.

It is said this splendid work is carried on at comparatively trifling expense, and the experiment has obtained so much publicity for Minneapolis that it is beginning to be called the "Minneapolis idea." It ought to prevail in Wilmington, and if it is too late to undertake it on a large scale this season, it can be started and enlarged next season.

BANK FAILURE IN LONDON

Within itself the failure of the banking house of Grenfell & Company, Ltd., in London on Saturday, should not affect the financial situation to any great extent, but it depends whether more banking concerns are weak from the same cause or for some other reason. When one bank fails others may topple down because of a generally weakned financial condition after long years of struggling against inevitable.

The failed London bank's capital stock was only $1,750,000, which is small as banking goes in a great financial centre like London, but the Associated Press regarded the failure as of such consequence at this time that the news was cabled all over the world. No doubt the depositors saw the failure coming, for the deposits foot up only $1,250,000, so that altogether the failure involes about $3,000,000. However, it is said the bank is solvent, and that the failure does not affect other banks in London.

The embarassment of the London bank is attributed to the business and financial depression prevailing in Canada. The Grenfell bank's failure was largely the result of large operations in Grand Trunk Railway stocks and securities, and just at present it is said the Canadian railways are in bad shape on account of having overreached themselves during the decade of boom in Canadian development. A reaction set in a year or so ago, and Canada is now experiencing the bad effects of a backset.

A London dispatch a few days ago expressed anxiety concerning the continued heavy borrowing of the Canadian government. It was even said that there was some indignation last week because Canada came into the market for another loan amounting to $25,000,000. It was secured on four per cent bonds, which sold at only 98. In March Canada borrowed $25,000,000 in addition to $20,000,000 in December and $15,000,000 in September. The latter issue sold as low as 97.

FOR HAWAII VIA WILMINGTON.

The New York Journal of Commerce states that the steamship Iowan, the latest addition to the American-Hawaiian line's fleet, sailed from New York last Thursday for San Pedro, San Francisco and the Hawaiian Islands. She carried a full cargo of about 7,200 tons, and will reach San Francisco in about fifty days. The vessel sailed by way of the Straits of Magellan, but when the Panama Canal is regularly opened for commercial traffic the Iowan and the other big ships of the American-Hawaiian line will be operated through the canal, saving probably more than half the distance now required for the trip. When the company's steamers use the canal they will sail from New York to San Francisco. Meanwhile a regular schedule is now being run by several steamers which go by the Magellan route.

We observe that some of these ships bound for San Francisco, Honolulu and other Pacific ports, make calls at intermediate ports where cargoes await them. It would be interesting to know what cargo commodities they carry out, for the probability is that freights from the South Atlantic ports might be concentrated at the port of Wilmington and picked up here by the Pacific-bound steamers. If the ships can come over the Cape Fear bar, they would no doubt be able to pick up cargoes here. When we find out what the Pacific coast and the Hawaiian Islands need of North Carolina products, we will be able to see the importance of inducing some of the big steamship companies to make Wilmington and Southport a port of call.

It was to have been expected that the other parties to the wrecking of the New Haven road would say that former President Mellen told a tissue of lies from beginning to end. At the same time, Mellen could not have done a thing if he had not been financed, and everybody knows that those who financed him got theirs before anybody else got a showing. The instances in which "high finance" got left do not clutter up the record.

A New York man says he gets along very well with his wife and wants no divorce. He says when his wife "gets on a high horse" he just simply feeds the horse a little "long green" and all's well till more long green is wanted. Another way he has of giving satisfaction at home is to drive up at regular hours on the water wagon.

We might fill a column about the re-nomination of Senator Overman without opposition, but nothing that could be said would be so complimentary as the unanimous voice of the Democracy in approving his record and awarding him another term of six years to keep on doing as well as he has been doing all along.

A big financial institution has suspended business—right while Wilson is President and a Democratic administration is in charge of our government. But—and the pity of it—that institution was located in London. Only for that reason is its failure not chargeable to the account of Democratic legislation!

Says a veterinarian: "Treat your horse just like you would like to be treated if you were a horse." It should be remembered, however, that a horse is always on the water wagon and doesn't care to be treated as if he were a man.

"Coattail swinging" is in full blast in South Carolina.

CURRENT COMMENT.

It seems that the people will not be given the legalized primary until they make it plain that they are going to have it—Durham Herald.

Mr. Roosevelt seems to be convinced that Mr. Wilson is not as great a President as he was, and his mild talk about calamity indicates that he doesn't think Mr. Wilson can bring about as great a panic as he did in 1907.—New York Herald.

If President Wilson really feels so bad about the absence of a merchant marine, why does not he and his party do something to encourage and help build up one? Since President Wilson has been granting special privileges to some, why not go a step farther, and not limit them to labor unions and farmers?—Chester (Pa.) Republican.

The Democratic State convention went on record as favoring a State-wide primary for National, judicial, Congressional and State candidates, thus leaving out county and legislative aspirants. The politicians could not swallow the whole dose at once, but they had as well get used to it. They will have to do it in time.—Durham Sun.

From Editor Cowan's description of the entertainment in store for editors at the Press convention, there will not be a moment of boredom. The editors are the best people in the world to enjoy these courtesies, and none will appreciate them more. Wrights-'vill give 'em schust a good time in dot right vay, as the Dutchman would say.—Durham Sun.

We were glad to learn from prominent Presbyterians present at the Fayetteville meeting of the Scotch last Thursday, that Dr. McDonald's challenge to the trustees of the Southern Presbyterian College and Conservatory of Music, of Red Springs, would be accepted, and the balance of the one hundred thousand dollars, stipulated to secure his subscription of ten thousand dollars would be raised. This also carries with it the change from its present long name to that of "The Flora MacDonald Memorial College," or "Institute." It is also tho't that if this is done, an additional hundred thousand dollars will be given by friends of education elsewhere.—Maxton Scottish Chief.

TO DEDICATE CHURCH

Interesting Occasion Yesterday at Council's—Attendance

A most interesting occasion yesterday at Council's N. C., was the formal dedication of a handsome church recently completed there by the Baptist congregation of that vicinity, assisted by good friends elsewhere in the State, this service taking place at 11 o'clock in the morning, followed by the formal presentation of a handsome Bible at 3 o'clock in the afternoon by George Washington Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of this city.

In the dedication of the handsome new church the pastor, Rev. A. H. Porter, was assisted by Rev. Livingston Johnston, corresponding secretary of the State Baptist Convention, dinner having been served after the morning service and the presenation of the Bible having taken place immediately thereafter.

A large number of Wilmington Jr. O. U. A. M., accompanied by members of their families went up on the 5 o'clock train yesterday morning to attend the exercises, returning last midnight. The presentation of the Bible was delegated to J. A. Mcorton, Esq., of the Wilmington bar, and among the Wilmington people in attendance upon the exercises were Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wood and daughter; Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Grimsley, Jr., and children; Councilor E. H. Toler; Past Councilor Edward Register, Past Councilors J. T. Eagles, E. J. Grimsley and others. The visitors from Wilmington looked forward to the day's exercises with much interest and pleasure.

HANDSOME RAILWAY BOOK

Seaboard Air Line Issues Most Attractive Shippers' Guide and Industrial Publicaton

Possbly the most handsome and expensive railway publication ever issued by a Southern road is an exceedingly attractive and comprehensive volume o 500 pages, bound in morocco and printed on heavy book paper, just sent out by the Freight Traffic Department of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad Co.

While it is officially called the "Seaboard Air Line Railway Shippers Guide," it is even more than a shippers, guide, in that it carries a splendid exposition of the resources in agriculture, fruit culture, live stock, minerals, timebr, water power, manufacture, finance and education for the use of shippers' buyers and prospective settlers, from practically every section a long its system. "The Progressive Railway of the South". The opening pages give the organization of the road, maps and illustrations of equipment, etc., with a brief foreword, which explains the nature of the publication in the following language:

"The policy of the Seaboard Air Line Railway in recent years has been to co-operate with, and extend reliable information to all those who desire to locate on this great artery of traffic. That policy is still carried out and the company's agents in different sections of the country are eve ready to supply prospective invetors and homeseekers with valuable data regarding this healthful and fertile section of the Union".

The book contains more than 50 pages devoted to North Carolina with very handsome illustrations of indstry and agriculture throughout this section. Wilmington is given first place in the North Carolina writeup and a number of very handsome views are given in the city, some of these beng principal streets, Seaboard terminals here, foreign steamer loading cotton at S. A. L. terminals; scenes in and around Lumberton, Maxton, Clarkton, Rosindale and in other places. Of Wilmington, the author of the Guide says:

"Wilmington, New Hanover county —Population 30,000. County seat. Wilmington is the largest commercial city in North Carolina and is located at the head of the Cape Fear ocean gateway with 400 miles of inland navigation and six railroads extending in all directions, making this port ono of the most desirable distributing points on the South Atlantic coast. Wilmington is situated at the junction of two large rivers along which millions of feet of black, sweet and tupelo gum, pine and firewood grow. The wood is being used for furniture, general purposes. Wilmington is among foremost of the Atlantic seaports. It is chiefly noted as a wholesale and building senter. This city has shown material progress in the erection of business buildings and residences during the past year, permits having been issued for about 500 dwellings and business houses, which include the new union station, large cold-storage plant, magnificent new Murchison Bank building, Young Men's Christian Association building, Cape Fear Club and other large structures. This section has a wonderul climate, having neither extreme heat nor extreme cold. Average temperaure, 72 degrees; average Winter temperature, 48 degrees. The average annual clear days, 132. The excellent climatic conditions largely contribute to abundant crops, the custom of growing two and three crops a year on the same land being very general. The productiveness of the soil and unequalled opportunities for trucking are attracting settlers from all parts of the country. The Chamber of Commerce writes as follows:

Wilmington has better freight rates than any city in the State. Surpasses all other North Carolina cities in distributing advantages for the manufacturer and wholesaler. There is a belt line around the city, reaching many desirable manufacturing sites, which may be secured at reasonable cost. As a deep water port it serves as a gateway for a large territory. This city has made splendid progress during the past five years, particularly noticeable in the many municipal improvements, which aggregate an expenditure of over $1,000,000. It has also gone forward with rapid strids in building operaticns, which amounted to more than $1,000,000 last year. There are about 50 wholesale houses located here and the business through this port by these concerns last year is estimated at $70,0000,000. As a banking center Wilmington undoubtedly leads in North Carolina. Wilmington has been recognized for many years as the fourth cotton port in the United States in the exports of cotton, about 317,831 bales having been exported last year. There were imported through Wilmington in 1913 about 183,499 tons of fertilizer materials for use in the manufacture of fertiliezr, and for the same period there were shipped from this point about 263,000 tons of the manufactured product. The Cape Fear river has 26 feet of mean low water from Wilmington to the ocean. We have at present eleven large terminals, which emphasizes its importance as a distributing point. Large cargoes from foreign markets are discharged at these terminals, which supply the demand from the interior. Wilmington has in addition to its splendid financial and educational facilities, several wholesale establishments, fertilizer factories, cotton mils, woodworking plants, compresses, large lumber plants and numerous other industries, all prosperous. The city welcomes investment in the way all well-meaning prospective settlers with open arms. Wilmington offers large inducements to the manufacturer and investor. There is an abundence of common labor to be secured here and manufacturers will do well to consider the many advantages this city offers in deciding upon a location for a factory. Wilmington's advantages as North Carolina's only deep-water seaport and its relative importance to the Panama Canal has recently caused it to be recognized with greater significance than ever before. The distance to Wilmington from Colon, Panama, by steamer route is only 1,552 miles. Large water front storage warehouses have been provided during the past three years, enabling this port to become the distributing center for large territory.

"In this city are located a number of large water front terminals of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, the erection of which marked a new era in the development of this port."

THE RAMBLER.

(By T. W. C.)

Money does measure power. There is no doubt of the truth. But is money, after all, worth more than it will beget? Modern ideas do not largely differ from those of ancient days. Men today stop—contemplate and decide to "build bigger barns." But there is a difference—modern millionaires do not often decide to 'take thine ease' —they are planning for bigger business. They are after more power. The danger in money is its power. If properly used that power begets blessing. If improperly, the result is disaster to somebody.

Your idea of progress may not be the same as that of your neighbor—but get out of his way and let him attempt the flight. When you find your neighbor or your town trying to do something, even though the method seems wrong to you—either get in line or get out of the way. Don't stand in the way of an effort to improve conditions. In every town The Rambler ever knew there were always a superabundance of men who never agreed with the suggested methods and continually got in the way of the progress wagon. Get in line or get out of the way—should be the motto of every man—booster or knocker.

The man who invented "vacations" was "some man."—From the summer resort keeper's standpoint. Enjoying a vacation is an art. Change of scene is good—almost absolutely essential and especially if your work is of a public or semi-public nature. Makes a man worth much more if he can sometimes get a month off—and indulge in intercourse with other men—somewhere—in the Blue Ridge, or on the seashore. Both are delightful. The Rambler loves the mountain tops—loves the impression of their presence. On the other hand the roar of the waves attracts others more. Take your choice—but be sure and "vacate" somewhere—good for you and good for your neighbors—you will come back home with the feeling that it is the best spot on earth.

View of Wilmington in Record.

In the issue of June 4 of the Manufacturers' Record, published in Baltimore, Md., there is a double page view of the water front and business section of Wilmington which shows up most attractively. The view is the same as is now being sold on postal cards by the business houses of the city and was made from a photograph which was made several months ago by the Haines Photo Co., of Conneaught, Ohio. The picture is remarkably distinct in outline and very neat in appearance. The view was sent to The Record by the Chamber of Commerce, of this city, under whose auspices the photographs were taken.

Makes Wrinkles Go "As If By Majic"

Want to banish every wrinkle — from face, neck, hands—easily, quickly, completely? Try the famous saxolite formula. Nothing else so nearly meets every requirement. Why? Because it is correct in principle and really, truly assists Nature. Possessing remarkable astringent and tonic properties, it both tightens the skin —thus naturally smoothing out the lines—and improves capillary circulation and nerve tone—tending to strengthen loose tissue and bring about a healthy condition. Yet, powerful as the saxolite lotion is, it won't harm your skin in the least. And it's so easy to get the inexpensive ingredients at your druggist's, and so easy to mix them.

Just dissolve 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel—that's all. Bathe your face in this — immediately every wrinkle and crease are affected, even the deepest. You are perfectly astonished, and delighted, with the result. You look like you've lost years from your age!

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE.

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a mortgage from J. C. Hankins and wife, Carrie D. Hankins, to Co-Operative Building and Loan Association, registered in Book 56, page 502, in the payment of which mortgage default has been made, the undersigned mortgagee will, on the 8th day of June, 1914, at 12 o'clock, noon, at the Court House door of New Hanover county, sell at public auction for cash, the lands and premises described in said mortgage, viz.:

Beginning at the intersection of the Southern line of Nun street with the eastern line of Wilson street, runs thence eastwardly along said line of Nun street 66 feet, thence Southwardly and parallel with Eighth street 132 feet; thence Westwardly and parallel with Nun street 66 feet to the Eastern line of Wilson street, and thence Northwardly along the Eastern line of said street 132 feet to the corner the beginning, being part of the middle of Lots 1 and 2, in Block 106, according to the official plan of Wilmington, N. C.

CHRIST'S CALL TO SERVICE

Rev. Dr. J. M. Wells Preached Strong Sermon at First Presbyterian Church Yesterday.

"I sometimes fear that we are losing sight of the fact that Christ is our King and that we are giving too much time to ourselves and too little to His service," said Rev. Dr. J. M. Wells at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning, in an urgent appeal to the members of congregation to give Christ the first place in their hearts and lives. This was the first sermon that Dr. Wells has preached since his return from the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian church at Kansas City. He expressed his appreciation of the kindness of the session of the church in giving him this short vacation.

"The Lord is our King," a clause from Isaiah, 33:22 was the text selected by Dr. Wells as the basis of his sermon. He explained that Christ is lord of lords and king of kings, because he affirmed it in several instances, notably when Pilate asked Him, "Art Thou then a king?" His answer to that question was, "I am a king, but My kingdom is not of this world."

Dr. Wells showed how the wise men of the East had recognized His kingly birth by bringing to the young Christ royal gifts and how after His years of toil and suffering when He was crucified Pilate had nailed to the cross upon which He hung the inscription, "This is Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews." His throne is one of power by right of birth, a throne of love because of the suffering He endured, and one of glory because of His triumphant resurrection, said the speaker.

Taking as the main theme of his sermon the question, "What is the work of our king?" Dr. Wells explained that it was first of all to subdue us to Himself. As in the kingdoms of the world so in Christ's kingdom conquest has been the main feature, but it is no trivial conquest that He set out to make. He had first to overcome sin.

"You know the power of sin; you remember that in the hour of temptation, even in the face of reason and of your best judgment, you went forward into sin," said the speaker. "Oh, the power of sin! It has come down through the ages. Alexander the Great could conquer all the known world, but he went down before the mighty onslaught of the evil one. Napoleon could lay at his feet all of Europe, but he could not overcome the power of his own selfishness.

"But there came one from on high who took on Himself the form of man and he overcame sin, meeting temptation in its severest form and under the most unfavorable conditions. He went forward ever victorious until that dark hour when He hung on the cross and cried out, 'It is finished.' The same battle that He endured goes on in every human soul but if we take Him as our king we too, at last shall be victorious over sin. And there is no sin that we cannot overcome with His help. By His presence He gives us power over our beings."

Continuing the speaker showed how Christ can subdue even the stubborn will—that mighty power that sits enthroned in every human soul—and make it submissive to His divine will.

Not only does He subdue us unto Himself but He also governs us by His power, Dr. Wells continued. He rules nature and although sometimes we try to explain that it is law that governs the universe, what we term as law is nothing more than the uniform way in which the ruler of the universe invariably acts. He also rules the moral world and His divine commands are written in our hearts and souls.

Christ shows His great love for His followers by showering upon them blessings of every kind and the most glorious thing about this is that they have access to Him at all times. He continually gives to us His grace and His peace. Not only that but He delivers us from all harm. The speaker pictured in graphic manner how men in times of sickness and distress when loved ones have been taken or they have lost all worldly possessions are tempted to dispute the truthfulness of St. Paul's statement that "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord."

However, we should always remember, he continued, that back of that promise and back of it all there is the King. He will not deliver us from pain, because that is not His way for making character, nor will He protect us from loss of property, for we may be too much devoted to that and it may be necessary for our good that it be taken away. But in the midst of trials and temptations we should remember that God is in His heaven, and that all's well in the world, if we are His children.

Dr. Wells did not discuss the nature of Christ's reign other than to bring out that fact that it shall be universal and everlasting. Other kingdoms have or will pass away but His kingdom shall never cease.

In conclusion the speaker showed what followers of Christ owe to Him for the sacrifice He has made for them. First of all they owe Him unquestioned, unqualified obedience. Too often, it is the case, said the speaker, that when He calls we fail to follow because it suits our pleasure better not to do so. We try to explain away His commandments by adapting them to what we say are modern conditions, said he.

His followers should be loyal and give Him their whole allegiance. There is no person in the world that is more hated than the one who becomes a traitor and how much greater an evil it is to be traitor to Him who is our king and our saviour.

Beginning last evening the services at the First Presbyterian church will be held on Sunday afternoons at 6 o'clock.

EXERCISES BY CHILDREN.

Trinity Church Last Night.

An enjoyable and interesting programme was rendered by the children of Trinity Methodist church last night in their annual Children's day exercises. There was not room for the large number of people in the church, and many had to be turned away. Much credit is due Mrs. J. W. Smith and Mrs. William Thigpen, under whose careful direction the children were trained, for the success of the occasion.

An offering was taken for dentitute and needy Sunday schools and also for the establishment of new schools, and a nice sum realized.

BETTER MILK CHAMPAIGN

Housewives' League Will Endeavor to Convince Consumers of Necessity for Pure Milk.

Realizing the importance of a pure milk supply, and the general lack of knowledge as to proper care and handling of milk in order to keep it free from contamination, the local Housewives League has planned a campaign of publicity, with the idea of presenting expert and first-hand knowledge to the consumers of Wilmington.

The following with reference to the matter is contributed by a prominent member of the League:

"It would appear that the current issue of the Housewives' League Magazine was published exclusively for the benefit of the Wilmington Chapter of the League, for it is called the 'Milk Number' and contains some very enlightening information about the care and handling of milk, both from the standpoint of the consumer and the producer.

"'Knowledge is power,' but when the consumer discovers that he has rights, he must remember that he also has duties, and so the Housewives' League is trying to create a spirit of co-operation and learn how an adjustment of the milk question may be reached by a method which will benefit all concerned.

"The following extract is taken from an article in the May Housewives' League Magazine entitled 'How Milk is Contaminated,' and written by Mary Duderidge."

"The friendly cow has always been a favorite subject with poets and painters. With her soulful eyes and her gentle ways she adds a note of peace to the rural landscape which cannot but appeal to the poetic imagination.

"Yet in the light of science she assumes a very different aspect. A pestilence walking at noonday and all the rest of the time she may literally be, and she furnishes the means by which other pestilences are carried far and wide.

"It is not, of course, the cow's fault that she does these things. She produces milk for her calf and not for us, and to her calf she gives it, usually, certified and safeguarded by a kind of natural preservative. Milk, like other vital fluids, possesses the power of retarding the development of bacterial life, a quality which it retains for from six to twenty-four hours after it is drawn.

"This is one of the reasons why the farmer's child thrives on milk which may kill the city baby. Even when the cow is diseased, her milk may not be affected, for nature always strives to protect the new generation.

"Professor Rosenau gives tuberculosis the leading place among the diseases spread by milk. Formerly typhoid was listed as the most dangerous, and taken all together the human infections are more serious than the bovine.

"Milk is infected with typhoid, diphtheria and scarlet fever from human sources, as cows do not have these diseases, and hundreds of epidemics have been traced to such infection.

"The peculiar danger of typhoid as compared with the tuberculosis infection of milk is that the germ multiplies with great rapidity in such a medium, while the tubercle bacillus does so only to a limited extent. A single typhoid germ may thus infect large quantities of milk.

"The diphtheria bacillus grows with equal rapidity in milk, and like typhoid, does not appreciably change the taste, odor or appearance of the milk. As for scarlet fever, we do not know what it does, because the organism which causes the disease has never been isolated.

"When milk is intended for the use of infants, the most harmless and beneficent germs may cause disastrous results, and these may get in with any soft of dirt. The yeast plant which raises our bread is an extremely useful member of society, but when taken by the baby in excessive numbers in its milk, it may cause so much fermentation that the intestines become painfully distended with gas and paralysis of the bowels and death may result.

"The hay bacillus, another ubiquitous and ordinarily inoffensive organism, often gets into milk and when in large numbers it makes great trouble in the baby's intestinal tract by causing putrefaction and consequent autointoxication.

"These human contagions and dirt-borne organisms may be introduced into the milk anywhere between the farm and consumer, but most of them get in on the farm.

"The milker is the first and in some ways the greatest danger. He is the human element, which is always beyond control, and the point at which all the precautions of certified dairies may break down.

"When milking machines, which have already been introduced into a good many dairies, become universal, the opponents of pasteurization will have a much better case than they now have.

"The milking machine has its drawbacks, however, owing to the difficulty of keeping it sterile.

"The dangers surrounding the milk that is dipped from a can at the grocery store into a container brought by the purchaser are so obvious that they need not be dwelt upon, but delivery in bottles isunfortunately very far from being all that might be desired.

"Its safety depends on the sterilization of the bottles before refilling, and this is a point upon which it is impossible not to have misgivings.

"Beer bottles, according to Professor Rosenau, are washed much more carefully than milk bottles, and to visit a brewery after a dairy is somewhat depressing. The contrast in the matter of bottle-washing is 'painfully in favor of beer.'

"When the milk is placed on the consumer's doorstep it may remain there for an indefinite length of time. It may be exposed to a temperature much higher than is good for it, or it may freeze and burst the cap.

"It may be tampered with by passing humans and other animals.

"A little pool of milk sometimes collects on top of th ecap. This may be drunk by a cat—and cats are peculiarly liable to diphtheria.

"A hungry boy or tramp may be moved to take a drink from the bottle, and to replace the liquid so removed with water of doubtful quality.

"When at last she takes in the milk the housewife too often puts it into a badly-kept refrigerator, forgetting even to wash the outside of the bottle.

"Cream is more dangerous than milk, because when cream rises it carries bacteria with it, and when separated from the milk by the centrifugal process the bacteria follow it in even larger numbers. The cream is, therefore, the dirtiest part of the milk; one sample was found to contain five hundred times as many bacteria as whole milk."

"Editorially the magazine explains:

"'We have tried here to explain some of the dangers and what they mean; also we have given the standards which should govern the production, handling and distribution of milk.

"'Armed with these, and knowing the danger, each housewife can constitute herself a committee of one to see that the milk she buys is pure."

CAPT. LOUIS BELDEN DEAD

Respected Wilmington Citizen Died Yesterday Afternoon After Long Illness—Funeral.

A host of friends in Wilmington and elsewhere will be pained and and grieved to learn of the death of Capt. Louis S. Belden, which occurred yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his home, No. 116 South Fourth street, after a long illness. He had been in feeble health for several years and last July was stricken with paralysis. The immediate cause of death was pneumonia. He would have been 70 years old in July.

The funeral will be held this afternoon at 5 o'clock from the residence and will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Milton, rector of St. James Episcopal church. The interment will be in Oakdale cemetery. The Cape Fear Camp, United Confederate Veterans, of which Captain Belden was an honored member, will attend the funeral in a body.

Captain Belden was one of Wilmington's most prominent and well known citizens. He was born in Fayetteville, but had been a resident of this city since his boyhood days. Answering the call to arms in 1861, although only 18 years of age, he became a member of Moore's battery of artillery, afterwards known as Miller's battery, and saw service during the greater part of the War Between the States in Virginia. He participated in the memorable retreat from Petersburg, just prior to the surrender at Appomattox. He was then as ever afterwards in life one of the bravest of the brave and believed emphatically in doing his duty to the best of his ability.

Returning to Wilmington he went with the old Wilmington and Manchester Railroad in the capacity of conductor, continuing in this work for about eight years. He then became associated with Capt. Henry Drane in construction work around Charleston, S. C. After several years in this work he returned to Wilmington and for a number of years was connected with Kerchner & Calder Bros., wholesale grocers. Later he was with the Clyde Line and then became associated with Capt. N. B. Rankin in the lighterage business. He continued in this business until his retirement seven or eight years ago.

Captain Belden also served in a public capacity several years ago when he was for two years chairman of the board of street commissioners of Wilmington.

He was a man of positive convictions and never feared to express his opinions. He numbered his friends by the hundreds and to them he was ever loyal.

Surviving him are two sons, Messrs. Arthur W. Belden, of Woodlawn, Pa., and Louis DeK. Belden, of this city, and one daughter, Miss Isabel Belden, of Wilmington. They will have the sincere sympathy of many friends in their bereavement.

The members of Cape Fear Camp, United Confederate Veterans, are requested by the commander, Gen. Jas. I. Metts, to meet at the W. L. I. armory this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. They will attend the funeral in a body.

LOST MONEY ON LETTUCE

Mr. Herring Points Out That Results This Season Should be a Lesson for Diversified Crops.

That the farmers and truckers of New Hanover county lost considerable money on their lettuce crops on account of poor prices, and that the effect of the drought on other crops will probably have a similar result in the marketing outcome, is the statement contained in the reports of Mr. J. P. Herring, farm demonstration agent for New Hanover county, for the months of April and May, submitted to the Board of Commissioners at their last meeting.

The reports are as follows:

"To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners.

"I beg to report that during the month of May I worked only 16 1-2 days, making 75 visits to farmers. Arrangements were made with Mr. C. R. Hudson, State agent, for me to be at home during the shipping of my lettuce.

"The lettuce crop was good but the prices in many cases were below cost of transportation, so the crop left the farmers in debt generally. We have beans, peas, potatoes, cucumbers, egg plant, etc., to catch up on, but owing to the dry weather these crops are poor, and we seem to be left on these also.

"The farmers should learn a lesson from this experience—not to put all their time and money in any one crop, but to do diversified farming. In the first place make all their supplies at home and then raise what truck they can handle well with the labor at their command. It is best to have more than one crop. If we are growing gold dollars, why not also grow a few silver dollars for fear the gold may not be at par.

"Another thing the farmers need is to get together in order to distribute their truck to a better advantage. The farmers see this, and yet are hard to get to act. They will not trust each other, yet trust the commission merchants."

The April report is as follows:

"I beg to report that during the month of April I worked 24 1-2 days, making 125 visits to farmers. Very few of the farmers planted their corn during April, as most of them intended following lettuce with corn. The bugs worked most of the corn planted in April, and it gave a poor stand. The stand at the county home was fair. I did not get in my April report at your meeting in May on account of being engaged with the shiping of my lettuce.

"Faithfully submitted,

Wrightsville Beach

There will be dancing tonight at Lumina. Music will be furnished by Don Richardson's orchestra.

Mr. C. A. Bland, of Wadesboro, a devoted follower of the rod and line and withal a most clever gentleman, is spending a few days at the beach. He will try his luck today and hopes to land several big ones.

The Hanover Inn opened Saturday night, under the management of Mrs. Annie C. Wall, of Hillsboro, and Miss E. E. Disosway, of Atlanta, Ga. Included in the guests registered there yesterday were F. L. Nash, Lumberton, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Whitaker, Raleigh; Lon. Canady, Nashville; Mrs. T. C. Gordon and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Pelham, Charlotte; Robert M. Riddle and L. Cladwell, Philadelphia, Pa.

Among the guests registered at the Seashore Hotel yesterday were I. W. Benton, Wilson; R. Van Bervant, New Orleans, La., G. M. Graham, Atlanta, Ga., Clyde A. Holt, Greensboro; John B. Glenn and family, Guanajinto Mex., W. H. Sawyer, Mullins, S. C., Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McKee, Charlotte, W. L. Boyd, Wallace; W. P. Harper, Atlanta, Ga., J. W. Ensign, Huntington, West Va., P. P. Beck, New York; Miss Marguerite Johnson, Wilson; M. G. Smith, Columbus, S. C., John C. Robbins, Winston-Salem; E. G. Douglas, R. S. Sellars and H. B. Dryer, Detroit, Mich., J. W. Collins, Goldsboro; Jos. E. Taylor and E. H. Morris, Charlotte; J. H. Hardy, Bluefield, West Va.,

Yesterday marked the first of the low round-trp excursion rates on the railroads to ilmington on Sundays and large crowds of visitors came in on all trains of the Atlantic Coast Line and on the Seaboard, the latter road introducing these very low rates for the first time this season. The number of the excursionists from near-by points was large and several extra cars had to be r un on the suburban line to the beach to accommodate them during the day.

A gentleman, affiliated with the transportation interests and who has closely followed the tide of beach travel for several seasons past, stated yesterday that there were a larger number of people on the beach now than ever before in his recollection for the time of year. He also stated from first-hand information that the hotels now have a large number of reservations for the latter part of June and the first part of July than was ever known before. Contrary to popular belief earlier in the year, it is now believed that the present season will be one of the largest in the history of the resort. The reservations thus far have been largely by people from Georgia and Alabama and from South Carolina, the latter a new territory from which the beach will draw quite extensively this season.

Wrightsville Beach yesterday—the first Sunday of the Summer season—was the mecca of about 2,700 visitors, an unusually large crowd for the opening Sunday. The majority of the visitors were Wilmingtonians, though many were from nearby points on the several railroad lines, coming in on the Sunday excursion rates, which are already effective.

From the climatic standpoint, the day at the beach was almost ideal, with just enough salt breeze to render it delightfull comfortable, even during mid-day.

The surf was a good one for bathing, and over 300 people went in during the afternoon, from the bathhouses at Lumina and the Seashort Hotel, with many others from the cottages on the island.

The Don Richardson orchestra at Lumina won the popular favor yesterday with two splendid concerts, one in the afternoon and again in the evening. The crowd at the afternoon concert was very large, and another large crowd heard the evening concert. Request numbers entirely made up the programme for the afternoon, and the many favorites endered by the orchestra brought forth numerous hearty enchores. The programme last night was a clever blend of classical and popular modern hits, and was just as much appreciated as the afternoon's offering.

The Wilmingtonians who heard the Don Richardson orchestra yesterday are more than well pleased, and look forward with pleasure to the series of Sunday afternoon and evening concerts, as well as the dances at the popular pavilion every night.

SERMON AT GRACE CHURCH

"Zaccheus and Jesus" Subject of Able Discourse by Rev. J. B. Bundy Last Night.

Using the first ten verses in the 19th chapter of St. Luke's Gospel in which is contained the account of Zaccheus and his meeting with Jesus on the road to Jericho, as a basis for his sermon, Rev. J. D. Bundy called attention to some striking suggestions to sinners, in an able discourse at Grace Methodist church last night.

The first and most important suggestion that needs to be emphasized, said Mr. Bundy, is that the sinner who wishes to see Jesus overcomes all obstacles that may have a tendency to keep him away. Zaccheus wished to see Christ and so earnest was he when he saw that it would be impossible to see Him in the great throng that gathered around him he climbed a sycamore tree, which was exceedingly difficult for him to do and besides meant a lowering of his dignity.

Frequently men say, he continued, that they would take Christ as their saviour, if there were not so many difficulties in the way. However, that is not the real reason; it is really because they do not wish to do so, Mr. Bundy declared.

The next lesson that Mr. Bundy found in the incident is that Jesus is eagerly looking for the sinner who is seeking Him. This does not mean that He is not always ready to save anyone and that he does not want to do so, but it does mean that He is especially anxious to help those who want help. And not only is it true of Christ, he stated, but it is also true of Christians, who are always interested especially in those who are seeking to find Christ for their saviour.

The speaker showed that Jesus sees the sinner as he is and where he is for He knows all things and it is impossible for the sinner to hide behind pretensions or professions of goodness.

When Jesus commanded Zaccheus to come down from the tree, he was quick to obey. Mr. Bundy emphasized the importance of the sinner following that example and to obey the commandments which are laid down in the Bible. What would have happened had Zaccheus failed to obey cannot be known, said the speaker, but we do not know that it would have been different and Jesus would not have gone to his house to dine. But Zaccheus, who was an object of contempt among his countrymen, was quick to obey because he was hungry for friendship and for one who could sympathize with him.

In conclusion Mr. Bundy made an earnest plea for those who are up the tree of pride, selfishness, self-righteousness, or perhaps some other sin to heed the commands of Jesus and become His followers. With numerous quotations the speaker showed that Christ has promised to save us from all sins, if we will only follow Him.

CHILDREN'S SERVICE AT FIRST BAPTIST

Sunday School Rendered Attractive Programme Yesterday Morning.

Children's Day was observer in the First Baptist church yesterday morning. A most attractive programme had been arranged for the occasion and the exercises were rendered in splendid style by the children. A large congregation was present.

The programme consisted of recipastor and the congregation, songs tations, responsive readings by the by the school, recitations and several solos with choruses. The children acquitted themselves most creditably. Several visitors expressed the opinion that it was the best children's day exercise that they had ever yet heard.

AN ANSWER TO MR. HAYNES

Dr. Foster Criticises Methods Used in Establishing Himself in the Public Confidence.

Before probably the largest congregation that has attended the regular Sunday evening service at the First Baptist church in several months, the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. H. Foster, last night took occasion to fire a broadside at the methods used by Mr. Carlyle B. Haynes and one of the doctrines taught by him in his evangelistic meetings which he has been conducting for the past two weeks in the tent at Eleventh and Market streets. "Who Changed the Sabbath from Saturday to Sunday?" was the subject of Dr. Foster's sermon, which in the main was an answer to the alleged declaration of Mr. Haynes that Saturday, or the seventh day, and not Sunday is the true Sabbath.

Dr. Foster called attention first to the methods used by Mr. Haynes to get a good hearing in Wilmington. He came here ostensibly to conduct an anti-cigarette crusade. He attracted a great deal of attention and elicited the sympathy and endorsement of many of the good people of the city, and of leaders among the church people, in this cause. The anti-cigarette crusade ended, he launched into an evangelistic meeting and secured considerable publicity and attracted crowds, the people having become interested in him because of the campaign against the cigarette. Never once did he announce that he was a Seventh Day Adventist or that their doctrines concerning the Sabbath were to be promulgated in his evangelistic meetings. But soon after he had worked himself into the confidence of the people and secured the crowds, he began an attempt to undermine one of the main doctrines of practically all the churches in the city and one of the very foundations of Christian civilization, by preaching that the Christian Sabbath, Sunday, is no more sacred than any other day in the week and that Saturday is the only true Sabbath.

Dr. Foster condemned in no uncertain terms the methods adopted by Mr. Haynes to work himself into the good graces of the community and to secure a good hearing, that his preaching against Sunday as the Sabbath might be the more effective. He had more respect for the man who would come out into the open and let the people know his purposes.

Dr. Foster took up the history of the Jewish Sabbath, which he admitted, everybody knew was our Saturday. He made copious use of Jewish history and Biblical references to show that the Jewish Sabbath was established, or ordained, three days after the deliverance of the Children of Israel from Egyptian bondage and as a day to be kept sacred by the Jewish nation in memoriam of that nation's deliverance. Following the ordination of the Sabbath, a law was given the Jewish nation concerning the observance of the day, and that law required that no work whatever should be done on the Sabbath—even for kindling a fire on the Sabbath the offender should be stoned to death. When the penalty is removed from the operation of a law, the law is annulled, the speaker claimed.

If the Seventh Day Adventists believ the law given to the Jews concerning the observance of their Sabbath still holds good, they should also insist on the penalty for its violation—every one of them would be stoned to death. We are not Jews and are not required to kep a law that was given exclusively to the Jewish nation requiring the observance of a day in commenoration of an event in that nation's history. The Jewish law passed, as did the Jewish nation.

The preacher then took up the Christian Sabbath, and showed by numerous Scriptural references that with the coming of Christ and the establishment of the Christian religion on earth, the Jewish priesthood passed, also the last of the laws that applied exclusively to the Jewish nation. Christ rose from the dead just at the beginning of the first day of the week. The Day of Pentecost was the first day of the week. The disciples of Christ held their regular meetings on the first day of the week. The Christian Sabbath was ordained with the first Christian church and has been the Christian Sabbath ever since. The answer to the question constituting the subject of Dr. Foster's sermon then would be that the Sabbath was changed from Saturday to Sunday by Jesus Christ himself.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT ODD FELLOWS HOME

The members of the graduating class are: Ethel Tyne Biggs, Hope Mills; Aaron Thomas Bowen, Wilmington; Lucetta Florence Gallop, Jarvisburg; Martha Maude Jenette, Goldsboro; William Carl Jenette, Goldsboro; Joseph Ethan Rose, Clinton; Anna Lee Suther, Concord; Horace Carter Thomas, Bakersville; William Bryan Thompson, Haw River; Bryan Beatrice Wagoner, Goldsboro.

—Mr. Frank Daugherty, the young steil worker, who fell from the top of the Murchison bank building several months ago, was able to leave the James Walker Memorial Hospital Saturday and went to his home in Pennsylvania. His right arm was broken in two places and this is not yet entirely well, but he hopes to be able to go back to work in a month or two.

Gossip From Washington

UPON one occasion when Mrs. Kern, wife of the senator from Indiana, was on a visit to the capitol Senator John Sharp Williams was introduced to her. After the usual exchange of greetings the gentleman from Mississippi looked gravely at Mrs. Kern and inquired, "Madam, did you marry this man of your own free will?"

Upon assurance that this was the case he remarked gallantly:

"I think John has done what an old darky on the home place said I had done when I brought my wife back home a bride.

"The old nurse met us at the gate, and when I told her, 'This is your Miss Betty now—my wife,' the old darky looked Miss Betty over very admiringly. Then she turned her shining black face to me and exclaimed, 'Massa John Sha'p, I's been heah fo' three generations o' brides; but, yoh, suh, yoh has jest outmarried yo'self!'"

Awhile ago Admiral Dewey wished to purchase a riding horse and on inquiry found an animal in Virginia which he was assured was a thoroughbred.

"A few days after," said the hero of Manila bay, "I was astride my bargain just outside of Washington when he cast a shoe. I drew up at a blacksmith's shop, which was fortunately near, to have the damage repaired.

"'Well, well, old boy,' exclaimed the blacksmith, patting my prize familiarly, 'you back here?'

"'That horse has never been here before,' I said. 'I have just purchased him from a dealer in Virginia He is a young thoroughbred, fresh from the fields of Fauquier county.'

"'I don't like to contradict a gentleman,' replied the blacksmith, 'but the mounted policeman on this suburban beat rode that nag for nigh on a dozen years until he was sold by the police department last spring to some o' them horse sharps down in Virginia. Them fellows can do wonders with an old plug!'"

ADMIRAL DEWEY.

The ancestors of Representative D. S. Church of California played quite a part in the civilization of California. The congressman's father and uncle went there years ago, when the San Joaquin valley was a desert. For hundreds of square miles this waste of sand and sagebrush extended.

The father and uncle camped one night where a mighty river rushed down out of the mountain. Here was water by the thousands of gallons rushing away in waste. There lay thousands of acres of land thirsting for its touch to transform itself into a paradise.

So the Churches went to work on their dream. And now by irrigation ditches, through which the river waters the land, this ancient desert has become a wealthy agricultural district.

When Representative Simeon D. Fess of Ohio was a youth he had a passion for reading. But there was a lot of work to do on the farm, and his brothers chided him for "wasting his time" with books. They said so much along this line that Fess finally did his reading in secret. He did not shirk his duties on the farm; neither did he neglect his mental development, and now he is known as one of the scholars of congress.

SIMEON D. FESS.

Representative Carter Glass, apropos of the new currency bill, said the other day:

"The banks now find that the currency bill is for their own good as well as for the people. The banks at first were wrongfully enraged. They were like Smith.

"As Smith's train started for the west he stuck his head far out of the window in his excitement, whereupon a brakeman called:

"'Put your head in there, or it'll be knocked off!'

"'Knocked off, hey?' roared Smith, shaking his fist at the brakeman. 'Well, it won't be knocked off by anybody the size of you, you sawed off, hammered down pigmy!'"

A new member of congress from Michigan is Francis O. Lindquist. His parents were Swedish immigrants to a small lumbering town in Wisconsin, and he left school when in the third grade. His youth was spent in working around lumber yards, docks and hotels, and at last he wound up in Greenville, Mich.

Ten years ago Representative Lindquist was pushing barrows of feed around a store in that town for a dollar and a half a day, and after a few months at that he saved the sum of $40. With this he set up in business in a small store for himself. At the end of two years he began to plan a big business of which he is now the head.

HANDY CATCHALL FOR THE LIVING ROOM.

If in every living room there were a handy receptacle for odds and ends a number of things oft wanted in a hurry would not be thrown into a waste paper basket and finally upon an ash heap.

A sort of catchall that is inconspicuous as well as ornamental and which may be hung up is made by deeply facing a circle of material of about a yard's diameter with some of the same material. These two edges are next separately bound in order to keep them firm, and the two layers are then partitioned into six pockets labeled distinctly "string," "tissue paper," "braids," "lead pencils," "tacks" and "memorandum pads," leaving the seventh and larger pocket formed by the center of the main circles for heavy wrapping paper. Along the edges of the contrivance, between each pocket, is attached a strand of the binding material, and these drawn together under a big fancy button form its hangers. The catchall is pretty in printed cretonne, figured denim, embroidered crash or any of the substantial fabrics of which utility bags are made. Its braid bindings may be of a silk, wool or linen weave, or of tinsel gimp if the bag is in upholstery damask or plush.

Waste of Peaches.

Over 200,000 bushels of peaches rotted in New York orchards in 1913 for lack of cars to transport them to market.

A Sanitary Hint.

Don't forget that microbes are apt to lurk about the mouth of the milk bottle. It should be carefully wiped off before the milk is poured out.

Prompt Settlement.

A suspicious looking individual entered a barber shop and while being shaved casually remarked, "I suppose a good many of your customers forget to pay?"

"No, sir," the barber replied. "There was a time when I used to give credit, but I never do now. In fact, nobody asks for it any more."

"How's that?"

"Well, you see," said the barber, trying the edge of his razor on his thumb nail, "whenever I shaved a gentleman who asked me to mark it up I put a nick in his nose with my razor and kept tally that way. They very soon didn't want to run up bills."

There was a tremor in the customer's voice as he asked beneath the lather, "Do you object to being paid in advance?"

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

To destroy cockroaches, cut up green cucumbers at night and put them about where the roaches are troublesome.

Crumpled and moistened newspapers are better for cleaning windows than linty cloths. Polish with clean tissue paper.

Fiber grass rugs are excellent for a living room floor. They can be scrubbed with soap and water as readily as a bare floor.

A good kitchen table should be strong and large, with drawers for recipe books, pad and pencil for orders, etc.

When you make bread, put a quantity of flour in the bread pan and set the sponge in the middle of it. There will be no sticky, doughy pan to clean in the morning, but one which needs very little washing.

When You Make a Meat Loaf.

The next time you prepare a meat loaf place two or three hard boiled eggs in the middle, end to end. When the meat is served a slice of egg is in the center of each slice.

RED HAIR.

Flamboyant Locks May Be Blamed on One or Both Parents.

If you know a red haired father or mother you will almost certainly find that some of the children at least have more or less auburn locks. And when, as sometimes happens, both parents are red it is almost a mathematical certainty that their children will be red haired too.

The odd thing is that this does not hold good with the same persistence in brown, yellow, black or any other color of hair. Red is what people who study heredity call a "dominant" color. It is strong enough to persist and triumph over other colors.

In eyes the dominant color is brown. The child of a brown eyed father and a blue or gray eyed mother, or vice versa, is almost certain to have brown eyes.

But, oddly enough, if both parents are brown eyed the baby's eyes may be—and quite often are—blue or gray, especially if there are blue or gray eyes among the grandparents on either side.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Boy's First Thought.

"Yes, snails have eyes. They are right at the ends of their horns."

"I wish my eyes were fixed that way. Then I could stick them through the knot holes in the fence and see all the ball games fur nuthin'."

Easy When You Know.

Take six toothpicks and so place them as to make four triangles without crossing the sticks.

Lay three of them on the table in the form of a triangle; then place one erect at each corner and bring them together at the top and you will have a pyramid whose base and three sides are triangles.

About the Eyebrows.

The eyebrows, which are so ornamental to the face, are really placed there for a very practical purpose, for if there were no eyebrows the sweat would run right down into one's eyes.

Lucy's Trouble.

"I wish my doll didn't have such red cheeks," said Lucy.

"That makes her look healthy," answered her mother.

"That's the trouble. When I play that she is very sick she looks so fat and rosy that I can't feel one bit sorry for her."

Riddle and Answer.

I grow in gardens prim, and there I always stay,
And yet I'm carried about by thousands every day.
Filled with sweetmeats good I give all children joy,
And yet I'm often given to a naughty girl or boy.

COTTON CROP SITUATION

Market Greatly Influenced by Crop News—Government's Condition Report Has Effect.

New York, June 7.—The government's final condition report of the season was published on Monday at noon. According to the official estimate the average condition of the crop as of May 25 was 74.3, which compares with 79.1 last year, and a ten-year average of 80.4. With two exceptions, 1907 when the condition was 70.5, and 1903 when it was 74.1, the end of May figures this season are the lowest in almost twenty years.

Texas, with a condition of 65, and Oklahoma, with 68, made the poorest exhibit in their history, and as these two States produce about 33 1-3 per cent. of the total crop it was very natural that a rather gloomy sentiment as to general prospects was created by the showing in this territory and that little attention was given to the percentages reflecting favorable conditions in other parts of the belt. As a matter of fact, the Mississippi Valley States of Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee compare favorably with last year's condition and are much better than the ten-year average figures. The eastern and middle Gulf territory shows a condition averaging considerably better than last year in every State except North Carolina and Virginia, which are identical in percentage for the two seasons. Georgia, the disappointing State last year, shows a marked improvement this season, and as Georgia is the second largest cotton producing State, this is a matter of considerable encouragement. The condition as a whole, however, is generally viewed by the trade as discouraging a big crop. Comparison is naturally made with 1903 and 1907, in both of which years the yield was disappointing, though it should be remembered that in each case although the June condition was low, the final unfavorable outturn was chiefly the result of adverse climatic conditions in September and October.

It is true that the largest crops have been made in most cases from a high June condition, but it is also true that the size of the crop has been largely dependent on the improvement or retrogression in condition figures over a period of years shows the fallacy of accepting early figures as conclusive evidence of final results. For instance, in 1896 the June figures were 97.2, the very highest on record, while the October condition had fallen to 60.7, the second lowest final so far recorded. The lowest October condition, 58.5, was made in 1909 in which year the June figures were 81.1.

In all the years when there has been a slump in condition, it has taken place during August and September and has been due almost entirely to the fact that there was a lack of stored up moisture in the soil. This year there is no deficiency in this respect, in fact the present low Texas condition is due entirely to continuous rains during May and so far as Texas is concerned, notwithstanding the many gloomy prophecies for that State, excessive rains have never been known to result disastrously. In 1900 it rained all through April and May, and yet Texas produced a comparatively big crop that year. There are, of course, many other factors besides rainfall to be considered, but the deduction from past seasons leads to the belief that so far as moisture is concerned heavy early precipitation followed by dry weather is better for cotton production than early dryness followed by late heavy rains. It is too soon, therefore, to conclude that this year's crop is to be a failure. With anything like a normal yield current quotations would be considered high. All this, however, will naturally depend on developments, therefore, it is idle to form an opinion now.

HENRY CLEWS & CO.

Good to the Ghosts.

Every ten years the Eskimos hold the dance to the dead, when ghosts are supposed to come out of their coffins and visit the Kos-ga, where they are given a feast, and retire well filled for another ten years. Sometimes the food is taken to the burying ground to save the spirits the trouble of moving. When a child is born among the islanders it takes the name of the last deceased member of the family, and on it devolves the duty of feeding its foster father's spirit. The Eskimos have a horror of being childless, because their spirits will languish and their name be forgotten. As they say: "S'pose no mika-nina (children)—ghost plenty hungry." Often an Eskimo will beggar himself giving a great feast in honor of his illustrious ancestor; but he gains great renown thereby, and places all his visitors under life-long obligations to him.—Wide World Magazine.

Expected a "Ripping" Time.

A merry schoolboy was about to spend his vacation on his grandfather's farm. He expected to enjoy a great and glorious time. The day before his departure, his mother, passing his room, saw him kneeling beside a chair in the corner with his head bowed. As the lad was still in the same position when she repassed the door, some ten minutes later, the mother stopped.

"Well, Richard, what are you doing?"

The boy looked up pleasantly.

"I'm 'most through," he announced, with a deprecatory wave of the hand. Then after another moment or so of silence, "I'm just getting my prayers said up before I go to grandpa's in the country. I 'spect I'll be too busy to say 'em there," he explained.

MOOD OF THE STOCK MARKET

Was to Attribute Great Influence to Political Developments As Affecting Values.

New York, June 7.—The mood of the stock market last week was to attirbute great influence to political developments as affecting values. In New York attention was centered upon Washington and foreign markets showed a disposition to dwell upon political conditions. Sentiment and prices fluctuated from day to day, with dealings on a very restricted scale but at some recovery from the previous week's stagnation.

The insistence of government authorities that signs of business depression are psychological or ficti tious served to dash hopes that the trend of politics would reveal a growing spirit of toleration toward big business. Progress of trust legislative action toward fresh investigations of railroad scandals and the result of labor legislation in Congress, were added factors.

Mitigating influences were the refusal of the Senate to move an inquiry into the New York Central merger, and inferences in favor of freight rate increases drawn from the remarks of Interstate Commerce Commissioner Clements before a Senate committee.

Previous high expectations of the crop were not fully sustained. The government's cotton estimate made a poor contrast with the abundant promise of the winter wheat. The week's weather map also showed deficiencies in some regions.

Revival in the steel trade still halted. A yielding tendency in the price of refined copper pointed to parallel conditions in that industry. The Missouri Pacific and Boston and Maine note extensions relieved some apprehension but investment demand for bonds remained sluggish, even while the extreme ease of money was unaffected by furthner gold exports.

STATE VETERINARY ASS'N.

Thirteenth Annual Convention at Wilson, N. C., June 23rd.

The 13th annual convention of the North Carolina Veterinary Medical Association will be held in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce in Wilson, N. C., June 23rd and 24th, and a large attendance is expected. Dr. T. B. Carroll, of this city, is president of the State Examining Board, and Dr. M. J. Ragland, of Salisbury, is president of the Association. The programme of the State convention opens at 3:30 P. M. with the address of welcome by Mayor O. P. Dickinson, of Wilson, the address of President. Ragland immediately following. This will be followed by a business meeting, the election of officers, reports, etc.

At 7:30 P. M., of the opening day there will be a banquet, the feature of which will be an address, "The Value of Inter-State Inspection," by Dr. Peter F. Bahnsen, State Veterinarian of Georgia.

On the second day of the convention, beginning at 9 A. M., there will be a series of technical papers of interest to the profession by Dr. T. N. Spence, Dr. A. C. Yow, Dr. G. A. Roberts, Dr. J. W. Petty, Dr. R. B. Jones and Dr. W. H. Kern.

At the afternoon session, beginning at 2 P. M., Dr. B. B. Flowe will discuss hog cholera; Dr. L. F. Koonce will discuss the Department of Agriculture's score card, Dr. J. J. Handley will talk on "Infections Abortion," and Dr. L. J. Herring and Dr. A. C. Jones will read miscellaneous papers. This will be followed by a clinic conducted by Dr. G. A. Roberts and a paper on "Unusual Cases in Surgery" by Dr. Herring.

The State Board will meet at 9 A. M., June 23rd, when all candidates for license to practise in the State will present themselves.

CHILDREN AWARDED PRIZES.

Commencement of St. James Sunday School Yesterday Afternoon.

The commencement of the Sunday school of St. James Episcopal church was held yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock when prizes were awarded the children who made the highest grades in the closing examinations of the school in the different departments. The school will be closed during the three months of summer. Under the capable leadership of the superintendent, Mr. S. M. Boatwright, the school has had a most successful year and the children have done fine work.

Dr. Milton had charge of the closing exercises and read a list of the members of the Sunday school with the grades that they made in the examinations. He also announced the names of those who had made the highest averages in the different departments and were, therefore, entitled to the prizes which are annually given by Dr. Milton.

Miss Katherine Elliott made the highest average in the senior department. Misses Carolyn Northrop and Rosalie Burbank made the same grade in the junior department and as Miss Northrop won the prize last year it was awarded this year to Miss Burbank. Don MacRae, Jr., Thomas Wright, Isabelle Hammond and Esther Gouverneur made the same grades in the junior department and were each awarded prizes.

The prizes for the senior and junior departments were beautiful crosses. The boys in the junior department were given handsome silver crosses and the girls pretty silver pins. Each prize was appropriately inscribed, showing that they were given in 1914 for the highest scholarship in St. James Sunday school.

ISRAEL GIVES BOND.

Traveling Man Arranges With Mr. Chas. Finkelstein as Surety.

B. Israel, the traveling man, who was arrested Saturday afternoon on a charge of violating the prohibition law by taking orders for a Cincinnati whiskey house, arranged yesterday to give the bond of $200, required by Justice Harriss, with Mr. Chas. Finkelstein as surety. The trial is set for Wendensday morning at 11 o'clock before Justice Harriss. It is stated that several well known men in the city will be summoned to appear as witnesses in the case.

An object of interest is a trunk which is said to have been in the possession of Israel. It has the appearance of an ordinary trunk but in it are arranged some 30 or 40 comportments in w hich were stored small vials of brandies, whiskies and wines. It is said that all the samples were of a good grade. The compartments are heavily matted on each side so that there is no danger of breakage.

Coal Was Used 3,000 Years Ago.

Greek writers 500 years before the Christian era mention coal in their works, and it was no uncommon thing in Egypt 500 years before that.

A long gap apparently comes after that, and coal is not heard of again until in England, somewheres about the time of William the Conquerer in the eleventh century. Records are found granting the privilege of mining for it to the people.

It was not until well along in the sixteenth century that coal was used to any extent in Paris, and in Germany the date of its beginning was even later.

Ounce of Prevention.

When little visitors come in to play with the children mothers will do well to put certain toys away, such as whistles, horns, and any musical instruments that must be placed to the lips. It is unsanitary for general use to be made of such toys. An unsuspected sore throat or mouth may trouble one of the little visitors or entertainers and the ailment be thus transmitted. It is a good plan to sterilize such toys occasionally, using borax in hot water, drying in the oven to prevent rust.

SUGAR THE STAFF OF LIFE

Tacoma Physician Comes Forward With Idea That Has Set Scientific World to Thinking.

The physiologist who discovered that your liver and your muscles manufacture sugar while you sleep has been surpassed by the German physician who uses sugar dissolved in water as an excellent surgical dressing for all sorts of wounds.

Drs. Jacques Pansot and Pierre Mathieu have just declared that when animals eat sugar exclusively for long periods their weight at first decreases, soon begins to mend and then falls away again as the diet continues.

Dr. H. Heald of Tacoma Park, D. C., disagrees with these laboratory findings. He says sugar is comparable to gasoline. As the latter is the fuel of the internal combustion engine, so sugar is the fuel of the human machine. Sugar, he says, is the staff of life, and man can produce more energy from sugar than from any other food.

A distinguished British heart specialist has lately proved the efficacy of lump sugar in the treatment of a man nearly eighty years old who was dying with a vicious disease of his heart. After all the usual remedial measures had failed one of the maids asked if there was any objection to feeding the sufferer lump sugar. The physician gave his consent and four lumps were given in a little water. These were repeated every four hours, and in a week he was a well man.

Doctor Berzeller recommends to one of the German medical societies the use of powdered sugar in the treatment of old, ill treated and neglected cancers. He says the application of sugar to the fetid pests lessens the disagreeable odor and discharges. Furthermore the general condition of the patient improves and all hemorrhages, cease. Indeed, unless you have had a long experience with cancer patients, you are liable to be deluded into the belief that the cancer has healed.

Ended Life's Troubles.

A pathetic story of poverty and privation was unfolded at Paris the other day, by the discovery in the Seine of the bodies of two young women clasped in one another's arms. They were soon identified as the two eldest daughters of a bookkeeper named Brucker, who had informed the police that the girls were missing, together with a boy aged fifteen and another girl aged eight. On rising to go to work in the morning, Brucker, who is a widower, was overwhelmed to find his children's beds empty and a sheet of paper on the mantelpiece bearing the words, "We are going to drown ourselves." The bodies of the two younger children have not yet been recovered, but the unhappy father has no doubt that they, too, threw themselves into the river. The elder girls were aged twenty-three and nineteen years respectively. The family lived close to the Seine at Auteuil, and the children apparently had gone down to the river in their night clothes only. The father had received notice to leave his flat, and was to have moved out the same day. The girls had only secured casual work recently, and were worn out after passing the summer on one meal a day.

World's Finest Organ.

Made in 1625 by the master artison, Nicolaus Mandeschiet, and described as the finest instrument of the kind in the world, an organ has been purchased abroad by an American dealer, who is said to have paid $100,000 for it. The purchase is linked with the name of Henry C. Frick. The instrument is of large cabinet size, with a keyboard about three feet long. The case is richly carved and inside is the maker's portrait and inscription giving his age and the honors accorded him. The organ was found in an old chateau in the Ardennes region of France, where it is said to have rested for 200 years. It is supposed to have been seized by a French officer at the time of the Thirty Years' war. Saint-Saens played on it some years ago and pronounced it the finest he had ever touched.

Bought State House.

Perhaps there are some palliating circumstances about the case because the victim was a simple Italian, not long in this country; but the scheme is so old and thin that no one who reads the papers should get caught. It was in Boston that Marc Anthony Otolo, an Italian, met two fellow countrymen, as he was admiring the state house. They offered to go into partnership with Otolo and buy the imposing building. Otolo was pleased and bit. He gave up his $650, which was put into a handkerchief with the money of the other men. The handkerchief was then entrusted to Otolo while the others sought a lawyer to draw up the deed. Otolo found it contained only some newspaper clippings. The bunco men haven't been found.

They Had Met Before.

One of the best-known judges of the king's bench division and an ex-cavalry officer by no means unknown in London's social world met one evening at a reception and found themselves side by side. The judge shook hands warmly with the officer and said: "I know we have met before; I recall your face perfectly. Do you remember where it was?" The soldier smiled grimly. "Yes," came the blunt reply, "it was at the Old Bailey, when you were good enough to tell me that I ought to thank my lucky stars that I was only in the witness box and not in the dock!"

IN A LEISURELY WAY

CERTAINLY THIS "WOOING WAS LONG A-DOING."

Diantha and Joshua Thought They Liked Each Other, But It Took Them 25 Years to Be Certain.

The recent death in a New Hampshire village of a placid, pleasant old lady, afflicted with very few infirmities at ninety-seven, has recalled anew the story of her courtship, which the villagers delight to tell.

As a girl she was very pretty, and had several suitors. It gradually became evident that she especially favored a certain Joshua. The others, one after another, withdrew, and left him a clear field, and there seemed nothing to hinder the happy conclusion of his wooing. He was, however—like the fair Diantha—of a leisurely disposition.

It was two years before he proposed, and was accepted. Everybody expected the wedding to follow soon; all the relatives approved, there was plenty of money, and each owned a house and land. But it was five years later when a farm helper overheard Joshua, invited to appraise the apple crop of his bride-to-be, digress from business a moment at the orchard gate.

"Dianthy," he inquired, mildly, "when be ye goin' to marry me?"

"Land, Joshua," was the reply, "if I'd known you was goin' to spring upsettin' questions, I wouldn't have ast ye over. Don't ye know a girl can't be hurried? Let's talk apples."

"No hurry, no hurry, Dianthy; take your time," agreed Joshua, amiably. "We're both comf-table as we be. Only folks seem to be kind of expectin' us to hitch before the season's out, and I didn't know's we ought to disapp'int 'em."

It was another five years before Joshua—whether of his own motion or under pressure of public opinion—repeated his question. Then he was put off on the plea that Diantha must "get her things ready."

She was several years about that; then the deaths of various uncles and aunts deferred the wedding for several more. After all was ready, it took six years for the lovers to decide whether they should live in his house, or in hers; then three years were required to dispose of the house to be vacated. Altogether, it took them a quarter of a century to get married.

They were very happy, however, and Diantha, after she was left a widow, never wearied of eulogizing her departed consort.

"Joshuay wa'n't what you'd call a driver," she would sigh, reminiscently, "but then, Providence had so fur provided for us that he had no call to be; and if he was slow-going, there never was a man more comf-table to go along with."—Youth's Companion.

Nitrogen From Air.

At Odda, on the west coast of Norway, is the largest plant in the world for making nitrogen out of atmospheric air. It liquifies 100 tons of air a day, out of which it extracts 77 tons of nitrogen. From this is made a fertilizer called cyanamide, of which 80,000 tons a year are produced. Cyanamide contains 20 per cent. of nitrogen, 12 per cent. free carbon, 60 per cent. of lime and 8 per cent. of inert substances.

It is used not only as a fertilizer, but also in the production of ammonium salts and nitric acid.

At Aura, also in Norway, another plant with 100,000 horse power, furnished by waterfalls, is being built with carbide and cyanamide furnaces to make 200,000 tons annually of cyanamide. This same company has bought water power at other places that will supply it with 1,000,000 horse power more and has plans for factories that will produce nearly 2,000,000 tons of cyanamide a year. Ultimately it will furnish as great an output of nitrogen products as the whole natural supply of Chili.

Met Death on Mountain.

A well known mountaineer, Dr. Preuss of Vienna, was found the other day in a terribly mutilated condition at the foot of a precipice a thousand feet high on the Mandlkogelof, in the Dachstein group in Styria. Doctor Preuss, who was twenty-five years of age, had been missing since the beginning of last month. Doctor Preuss was climbing with two English visitors on the Aiguille Rouge de Pentaret, near Courmayeur, France, when they met their tragic death more than a year ago. Doctor Preuss owed his life on that occasion to the fact that he was not roped. He was able to make his descent to Courmayeur and conduct a search party to the scene of the accident.

As the Country Sees It.

The city papers poke fun at the items in the country papers which tell of John Doe butchering a hog, or Jim Smith visiting at P. Jones' over Sunday, but here is the Kansas City Star printing columns of articles and editorials about the "Nullo Bid in Auction Bridge," as if it were one of the absorbing topics of national concern. It all depends on the point of view. The city people don't care a whoop about who butchers the hogs, as long as the farmers continue to produce them for their consumption, neither do the people outside of the cities care a whoop about the nullo bid, whatever that is, having a whole lot of more profitable and intellectual matters to worry about.—Cimarron Jacksonian.

The Spirit of Progress

During the last few years Wilmington has made splendid progress in many directions—her population has increased rapidly; her streets have been improved and beautified; her car lines have been extended; many handsome buildings have been erected; her school system has been added to and improved; and business enterprise has prospered.

A natural and commendable desire for better things has filled our people with a spirit of progress and improvement.

We must keep the good work up. Every man, woman and child should take a part in this forward movement. This bank can help you do your share. Come to see us.

Atlantic Trust & Banking Company

WILMINGTON, N. C.

Always "On the Job"

There's that to be considered about a Trust Company as Trustee and Executor.

An individual might take a long vacation or a business trip, or he might be sick. In that case, the affairs would be turned over to some one else, perhaps someone who is incompetent.

This company is Always on the Job.

We pay 4% compound interest every three months on your savings.

J. G. L. GIESCHEN, Vice-President.
THOS. E. COOPER, Vice-President.
R. L. HENLEY, Cashier.

MEN DIFFER

as to height, size, weight, temperament, etc. When it comes to teeth, they all know how much good teeth mean to them, if they present a good appearance. That's accomplished by

Our Modern Dentistry

If your teeth aren't good, let us examine them and tell you just what it will cost to replace the bad ones with perfect new teeth, and fill those that are but slightly decayed.

We do all kinds of dental work in a reliable manner.
